MISS MABEL'S HERO

By ... Roland Arthur

Copyright, 1912, by the R. S. Moore Company

When Miss Mabel first dawned on the office, John Henry, instead of patronizing the crap game in the noon hour, bought two cream puffs and a salt pickle from Dago Charley around in Exchange place, then dodged into the nearest barber's for a hair cut. The following morning he astonished his mother by voluntarily donning a clean collar, and for the first time since infancy she discovered that his morning ablutions had extended below the collar line usually referred to by John's associates as the "high water mark." Saturday when he received his pay envelope he caused further remark by investing in a highly colored and highly scented bottle of hair oil, and thereafter he presented himself at the office with his ruddy locks properly slicked down.

Only the junior partner noticed the metamorphosis and laughingly remarked to the head bookkeeper that John Henry was evidently "mashed" on the new typewriter. Gregory Ellis merely frowned over the long rows of figures he was adding up, and the junior partner, finding his joke unappreciated, went to tell it elsewhere.

John Henry was not the only attendant in the office who had fallen under the spell of Mabel Moorfield, for Ellis had looked with approval on her trim figure ever since she had timidly presented herself at the office with a letter from the typewriter company and had quietly taken her place at the little desk by the window. Unlike John Henry, however, he was not disposed to wear his heart upon his sleeve, and even Miss Moorfield was unconscious of the spell she had cast over the chief accountant, whose only love appeared to be his books.

John Henry was an ardent worker. No country school mistress ever received a more regular tribute of fruit, and no one in the office could induce John Henry to move as quickly as when he was on an errand for Miss Mabel. He was the office boy in the great brokerage concern of Stanton & Stangefeld, and unlike the messengers, his duties were confined to the office, where he could feast his eyes upon the dark brown head always industriously bent over its work. For several months John Henry was apparently alone in his devotion. Then, with mingled disgust and delight, he observed that Ellis was his rival.

The disgust was occasioned by the fact that Ellis' attentions were received with a quiet appreciation which indicated that they were not unwelcome. But even in the face of this rivalry John Henry realized that the course of true love never did run smooth and that all the heroes of the lurid fiction he affected won their ladyloves in the face of the most strenuous opposition. Often as he sat at his desk by the gate he called to mind the nonchalant fashion in which Diamond Dick and other half dime heroes had disposed of all opposition, and he had sought to decide the manner in which he would by some brilliant maneuver cut out Ellis and win Miss Mabel's hand and heart. He had about decided that he would rescue her from the burning building, in spite of the fact that the structure was supposed to be fireproof, when a new element was forced into the situation.

This was nothing less than Stangefeld's sudden interest in the new typewriter. As the junior partner he was at liberty to call upon Miss Moorfield's services, and several times John Henry observed that she made her exit from Stangefeld's private office with flushed cheeks and averted eyes. Worldly wise as most Wall Street office boys are, he realized that Stangefeld probably favored his unwelcome attentions upon Miss Moorfield, and he vainly cudgled his brain for some scheme by which he might foil the villain and at the same time retain his position. A villain and a rival were possibilities that brought joy to John Henry's heart—joy tempered only by a realization that the loss of his position would not only cut him off from all contact with Miss Mabel, but would undoubtedly result in an unpleasant condition of affairs at home. Therefore he discarded his plans for summary vengeance and bided his time.

His time came sooner than he expected, for one day Miss Mabel was "Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness caused by hay fever and asthma that few thought I could get well, but I learned of the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung disease it is the safest cure in the world and is infallible for cough, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and trial bottle free at W. L. DeLano's.

City Property for Sale

HENDERICKS' ADDITION TO EUGENE.—To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have laid out an addition on the south side of the city and north of College Hill Park. I have 120 lots in this addition, and am selling them very low so as to enable every one to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $50 up.

ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Willamette street.

WHITAKER'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.

COLLEGE HILL PARK.—I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. I will advance the price soon. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.

HENDERICKS' ADDITION TO COLLEGE HILL PARK.—We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1300 young fruit trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, plums and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban piece of property. It is known as the Locust Hill farm, and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.

I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

Whale-Oil Soap.

On and after Monday, July 14, the Eugene Soap Co. will have on hand a full supply of whale-oil soap for spraying purposes. No need to send out of town for it when it is so plentiful here.
