Corsey's "Initiation"
 By HENRY WINTHROP
 Copyright, 1904, by the S. S. McClure Company
 "Here y'are, gents, only 10 cents apiece! The art of the world, gentlemen, for 10 cents apiece. Genuine pictures for the small sum of one dime, 10 cents. Stop right up now before the limited supply is exhausted."
 Priscilla Gardner, driving down Tremont street in her private hansom, poked her umbrella through the trap in the roof. "James," she called, "drive slowly past that man who is selling photographs. Drive as slowly as you can, and drive close to the crowd."
 In a moment the hansom had wheeled and was retracing its route past the street corner, where a muscular looking young fellow was handing out unmounted photographs as rapidly as he could make change. Miss Gardner leaned on the apron of the hansom and eagerly scrutinized the face as the cab slowly passed, but there was no interruption in the patter that helped dispose of his wares.
 "Here you are," he said as he passed over a photograph and pocketed a ten cent piece; "Diana for a dime, and cheap at the price. No extra charge for Venuses or Psyches; one dime, 10 cents. Step up, gentlemen, and take your pick."
 The cab had passed out of hearing now, and Miss Gardner sank back on her cushions. There was a vexed expression on her pretty face as she murmured, "How can grown up men be so silly."
 That evening at 7 Gerald Corsey, immaculate in evening dress, presented himself at the Gardner residence, where he was received by Priscilla and her father, the Hon. John Alden Gardner. The girl's eyes were dancing as she gave him her hand, but her "good evening" was in the demurest of voices. Perhaps she was in awe of the Honorable John. Gerald stood rather in awe of the gentleman himself.
 "The latter was more polite than cordial. 'I am very sorry that an important business engagement prevents my making one of the opera party tonight, but my sister, Miss Gardner, will take good care of Priscilla, and I will probably drop in later and see you all safely home.'"
 Gerald wondered in what capacity he was going, since Miss Gardner was considered so woefully in need of a protector.
 Half an hour later the Gardner carriage drew up before the opera house.

It had been a most uncomfortable ride for Corsey. The older Miss Gardner had a bad cold and was afraid to talk. Priscilla was in a maddening mood—so superior and dignified, with a new touch of condescension in her voice. Could she have heard anything? A hot flush rose to the man's forehead, and what was she humming now— "Oh, What a Difference in the Morning!" Decidedly she had heard. He could not see how her eyes were still dancing, and he leaned back in his corner savage and miserable.
 At the opera the ladies, like true Bostonians, devoted themselves strictly to the performance. Gerald tried to follow their example, but his eyes wandered back to the study of Priscilla's pure, clear cut profile. She was radiantly beautiful tonight, with yet that new touch of superiority that seemed to place her far beyond his reach. Why had he ever dreamed that she was different from most girls and cared nothing for mere appearances? He had been mistaken—she, too, set up money for a god.
 Priscilla's half laughing, half ironical smiles died away under the influence of his moodiness. It was a relief to them both when Mr. Gardner appeared on the scene. He insisted on Corsey's going home to supper with them.
 At the table the two men talked Harvard. Priscilla listened quietly. As she noted how strange and constrained Corsey's manner was she came to a sudden determination. The conversation had drifted to the subject of club initiations, when she broke in eagerly. "I think," she said, "that I saw a novice undergoing his ordeal this morning. There was a man selling photographs on Tremont street in front of the Common, and he didn't look a bit like the ordinary street peddler."
 Corsey smiled at her in amazement. So this was what she had thought!

"TO BE PERFECTLY FRANK WITH YOU, I NEEDED THE MONEY."

Saved From Awful Fate.
 "Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness caused by hay fever and asthma that few thought I could get well, but I learned of the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world and is infallible for cough, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and rubettes free at W. L. DeLano's

But what would she think when she knew the truth? His voice was very grave as he said, "So you saw me?" "Yes, and I have begun to think that you did not like my seeing you." Corsey flushed slightly. The Honorable John was looking interested. "What society did you join, Mr. Corsey?"
 "The younger man squared his shoulders. "To be perfectly frank with you, it was not an initiation; it was just that I needed the money."
 Priscilla gave a little exclamation and stared down at the bunch of violators that he had sent her that afternoon. They must have cost—oh, so much! And he had needed the money! The look that she turned on Corsey was different from any that she had vouchsafed him that evening. Perhaps it gave him courage to face the Honorable John.
 "You did not give me to understand that you were trying to work your way through college when—when we had our little talk," Mr. Gardner said coldly.
 "The flush on Corsey's cheek deepened. "When I induced dad," he said, "to let me come to Harvard, where he had graduated, instead of going to some western college, he objected because he said he couldn't keep an eye on me. In the end he withdrew his objection on my promising that during the four years I would neither borrow money nor get anything on credit. You see, his college chum committed suicide in his senior year because his father had failed in business and he could not pay back large sums of money he had borrowed."
 "Having made the promise, I was bound to live up to it. My remittance, which was due the day before yesterday, did not come. When you so kindly invited me to join your party this evening, I telegraphed for money and was notified that all the wires were down in that section of the country. I simply had to have the money, and to resort to a pawnshop would have seemed like evading my promise."
 "A cousin of mine who is traveling in Europe had just sent me 150 photographs of the sort popularly thought to be most in demand in a student's room. I kept twenty-five or thirty of the best and sold out the rest at 10 cents apiece. I made $12.00, and that is why Miss Priscilla had her violets as usual. I might have passed it off as an initiation, but I don't want to sail under false colors."
 He ended almost defiantly and was surprised when the Honorable John reached across the table and shook him heartily by the hand.
 "Well, done, my boy!" he cried. "I wish I had a son like you."
 And Priscilla—why, Priscilla's eyes were shining with what looked suspiciously like tears.
 When she had said "good night" and Corsey had held her hand for one hour, delicious moment, the two men sat smoking quietly in the freight. The Honorable John at length broke the silence.
 "Some time ago, Mr. Corsey," he said, "you asked my daughter's hand in marriage, and I said I must have time to think it over. I must confess that I did not see the matter in a very favorable light at first, but tonight I have changed my mind. You can have Priscilla—that is, if she will have you." And Corsey knew that he had passed his initiation.

Have Manxmen.
 One afternoon in October, 1880, a Norwegian ship in a fearful tempest was drifting upon Contrary head, on the west coast of the Isle of Man, a perilous place for ships. All Peel was down at the beach watching her. The lifeboat was got out, and there were so many volunteers that the harbor master had no difficulty in selecting a crew.
 The Norwegian had lost her masts, and the spars were floating around so that she was dangerous to approach, but the lifeboat reached her.
 "How many of you?" cried the coxswain to the Norwegian captain.
 "Twenty-two."
 The coxswain counted them as they hung on the ship's side and said: "I only see twenty-one. Not a man shall leave the ship until you bring the odd one on deck."
 The odd one, a disabled man, had been left below to his fate. He was brought up, and all were taken aboard the lifeboat and safely landed on the beach. The Norwegian government struck medals for the lifeboat men and sent them to the governor of the island for distribution.
The English and French Orator.
 With us hearing orations is a serious, dreary business; to the Frenchman it is an artistic pleasure and a holiday function, even though it be at the graveside or in the throes of a revolution. Fine language, whether in a speech or book, he welcomes as an aesthetic luxury and emotional stimulant, the fitness being of course proportioned to his degree of cultivation, for academicians have been found to own that some phrases, highly effective in their day, are only vulgar fustian. He views the eloquence of the rostrum much as we do that of the stage—as a professional art, whereof he is a sharp and enthusiastic critic. Truth, cold veracity, naked fact, prosaic realism, are not what he seeks, but inspiring themes clothed in grand words—London Academy.

 City Property for Sale
HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO EUGENE.
 To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have laid out an addition on the south side of the city and north of College Hill Park. I have 120 lots in this addition, and am selling them very low so as to enable every one to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $50 up.
ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.
 I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Willamette street.
WHEATCRAK'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.
 I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.
COLLECK'S HILL PARK.
 I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. We will advance the price soon. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.
HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO COLLECK'S HILL PARK.
 We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1800 young prune trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, plums and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban piece of property. It is known as the Locust Hill farm, and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.
 I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.
