MRS. RIODAN'S THORWALDSEN

By WALTER A. TICE
Copyright, 1902.
By the S. S. McClure Company

Every auctioneer in town knew her and expected to stumble upon her, whether at the fashionable Broadway sales or in the dimmest corner of the ghetto, and never one of them had a good word for her.

Mrs. Riordan's parsimony was as notorious as it was unnecessary, but it was her hobby to acquire bric-a-brac at ridiculous bargain figures. Had the original Venus de Milo been offered to her at $500,000 she would have held out for $400,000. Nothing gave her such exquisite pleasure as to escort a guest to some dim niche in her much decorated house and murmur with a gentle, cooling infection:

"So glad you like it, dear. I purchased it for a song. Such a bargain! You wouldn't believe it if I told you."

In vain had wily auctioneers endeavored to entrap the lady in some of their clever schemes. She invariably scented danger and stopped bidding just when they saw the hump led to slaughter. A group of these worthies who had been called in to examine a superb collection of art goods drifted into a cafe to lunch together, and Mrs. Riordan's hobby came up for discussion.

A wide-awake chap recently from Chicago listened to the tales of her shrewdness and finally remarked:

"Gentlemen, I wager a supper party for that sale I will not only force Mrs. Riordan to purchase a certain article which I shall select, but she will pay at least 50 per cent more than it is worth."

The supper was quickly taken, and cash bets were added, the young auctioneer taking all offers. In less than a week Mrs. Riordan commenced to receive mail regarding the sale of the famous Burton collection. Almost daily there arrived either an enticing circular or a simply engraved card reminding her of the date of the sale until she became actually excited over the prospect.

When the day arrived, Mrs. Riordan was among the first on the scene, but not earlier than two young men whose tastes in bric-a-brac seemed closely allied to her own. One of them, whose face was that of a student and whose garments in some indefinable fashion suggested foreign blood and the artisseemed to gleam in the uncertain light like burnished gold.

The men made a note of the number and then moved on, but Mrs. Riordan still lingered. She would have that piece, for she had heard the artist remark as he turned away that no one in the room would probably realize the real value of that bit.

By the time the sale opened Mrs. Riordan was in a feverish state. The auctioneer rolled off his customary jargon, bidding went merrily on, but Mrs. Riordan heard nothing until the auctioneer reached the Thorwaldsen. Some one bid $5, and Mrs. Riordan bestowed on the ignorant individual a glance of scorn. The bids rose slowly, and at $25 Mrs. Riordan entered the arena, and so did the young artist. Up went the figures until finally these two were bidding steadily against each other.

"One hundred dollars!" exclaimed the artist nonchalantly.

"One hundred and twenty-five!" snapped his rival.

The artist roused himself.

"One hundred and fifty!" The drawl had left his voice.

Mrs. Riordan hesitated.

"He wants it. He knows bronzes, and—so do I," she thought.

"Going, going, going!"

"One seventy-five!"

The artist turned a troubled face toward his friend. They conferred anxiously. The auctioneer looked from one to the other. Mrs. Riordan felt her heart contract suddenly. She wanted that bronze. What was the artist going to do?

He shook his head. The auctioneer's hammer fell. The bronze was Mrs. Riordan's property, and, giving her address and settling the bill, she hastily left the room. An hour later, having completed her other shopping, she dropped into a fashionable restaurant, feeling that, having secured a bargain, she might treat herself to an exceptional luncheon. She had barely given her order when from behind a palm she caught tones that seemed strangely familiar, that drawing, dulcet note she had heard before. And what was he saying?

"It's a jolly little lunch, isn't it, Madge? And let me tell you I earned it. I haven't played a part since the dramatic club days at college, but I flatter myself I did quite well this morning. What I know about bronzes would not cover your visiting card; but, heavens, how the old lady did snap at the bait! One seventy-five, and she could get a brand new one for a hundred!"

The next afternoon a couple of women friends were taking tea in Mrs. Riordan's home, and one of them spied the Thorwaldsen.

"What a clever bit, Mrs. Riordan! And you've never shown it to us." The guest approached the figure and touched it daintily. "And of course you got it for a song. You always do, lucky creature!"

"Yes," murmured Mrs. Riordan, "for a song." Then she added under her breath as she passed the vases, "But there were a few high notes in the song."

Why He Kept a Dog.
A prominent dog fancier and wealthy man of Philadelphia stepped into a grocery the other night and accidentally stumbled over a fat old German who was sitting in a corner smoking his pipe.

Under his chair was the most remarkable specimen of a dog that the gentleman had ever seen. It had the appearance of a pug, with rough, red hair and a long tail. It was impossible to resist laughing at the placid old man and his nondescript dog.

"What kind of a dog is that?" asked the gentleman.

"I don't know," replied the German. "I suppose you use him for hunting?"

"No."

"Is he good for anything?"

"No."

"Then why do you value him so?"

"Because he likes me," said the old fellow, still puffing at his pipe, and the expression of the dog as he looked up from under the chair fully confirmed the statement.

"There is no better or stronger reason than that," asserted the gentleman emphatically as he walked away.—Philadelphia Press.

The Birds' Nests That Men Eat.
The swifts arrive in the Andaman Islands toward the end of November, but they take their time in building the nests, which are formed from a gelatinous secretion from the salivary glands of those beautiful members of the swallow tribe.

If there has been a wet December, the first crop of nests is generally a poor one, being soiled by the damp and drippings from the roofs of the caves. Collectors, however, begin in January to go around the island to the different caves in an open boat. The best quality resemble pure Indian glass and are worth their weight in silver. Afterward there are two other collections. The caves in which the nests are found are scattered about the islands; some are far inland, others in rocks concealed in mangrove swamps.—London News.

The Love of Fine Linen.
In the German household the love of linen is a passion. During the French war under Napoleon when from every town and hamlet the terror-stricken people fled before the approaching armies before all else they sought to save their many chests of homespun linen, and when peace returned what had escaped the Argus-eyed enemy was tenfold more precious because of the horrors witnessed and the dread of German reprisals for above rubies her girls of snowy linen, the labor of many happy hours.

ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Willamette street.

WINTERBURN'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.

COLLEGE HILL PARK.
I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. I will advance the price soon. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.

HENDERSON'S ADDITION TO COLLEGE HILL PARK.
I have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1300 young fruit trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, plums and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban piece of property. It is known as the Locust Hill farm and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.

I am not in real estate business as a business, we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

New Addition to Eugene.
R. F. Baker & Co. have platted the R. F. Baker land containing of 32 acres, situated two blocks south of the Patterson school building. These are desirable lots and are for sale at reasonable prices. For further information call on
