HERBERT LEIGH, ASSAYER AND METALLURGIST

Eugene, Oregon.

The Rheumatic Fiend.

"I have been in the business for nine years," says a drug clerk quoted by the Philadelphia Record, "and up to date I have learned of 3,000 cures for rheumatism which regularly licensed physicians know nothing about—or, at least, if they do, they don't recommend them. People come in suffering from rheumatism—and it's queer that people who suffer from rheumatism all seem to look and act alike—and present a doctor's prescription."

"The first thing they want to know is how much it's going to cost. I look over the prescription and tell them, and then they invariably rear up on their hind legs and howl. They tell me about the virtues of something that cured Uncle Henry—goat's milk, drunk at 3 o'clock every morning; a raw onion carried in the left hand hip pocket, a horsechestnut carried in the vest pocket, magnetic rings—oh, all sorts of things that I've made notes of. It has become so that I am discouraged over the chances of filling a prescription for a rheumatic patient."

A Difficult Feat. In the old days of western Pennsylvania, when the people had little money to pay for teachers and could spare their boys but little time from the work of the field, school "kept" almost incessantly during the few weeks when it was in session, with no Saturday holidays and very brief recesses. At one little schoolhouse on the mountains an old fashioned Irish schoolmaster was once employed who kept his boys grinding steadily at their tasks, but gave them permission to nibble from their lunch baskets sometimes as they worked.

One day, while the master was instructing a class in the rule of three, he noticed that one of the pupils was paying more attention to a piece of apple pie than to the lesson. "Arrah, there!" said the master, "Jack Bales, be listenin' to the lesson, will ye?" "I'm listening, sir," said the boy. "Listenin', is it?" exclaimed the master. "Then it's listenin' wid one ear ye are an' atin' pol wid the other!"

A Singular Marriage Custom. The Kurds have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marriage custom, which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, carries his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and is desperately assaulted the whole way by a number of girls.

Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who, in the coming home with his bride, can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the late amazons often inflict on him marks which he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to avenge slighted love.

An Excited Vision. "Baptizing days" are great events among the negroes of the south. On one occasion the old black preacher took two candidates, one a middle aged, sedate, quiet man, the other a young, excitable fellow, well out in the stream, where the water was waist deep. He put the older one down first, who came up, folded his arms and looked dignified and pious.

The younger one, after being put under, came up greatly excited and shouting: "Glory! Glory! I seed de Lord! I seed him in de water—right down dar at de bottom!"

The older one, patting him on the shoulder, said: "Hush, honey; hush. Dat warn't de Lord. I seed it. It was nothin' but a terrapin."—New York Tribune.

How Lincoln Felt. In 1862, says a writer in the Kansas City Journal, Colonel Alexander of Topeka, who was an intimate friend of President Lincoln, visited him at Washington and found him in a greatly depressed state of mind.

"This being president isn't all it is cracked up to be, is it, Mr. Lincoln?" inquired Colonel Alexander.

"No," said Lincoln, his eyes twinkling momentarily. "I feel sometimes like the Irishman who, after being ridden on a rail, said, 'Begorry, if it wasn't for the honor av the thing, I'd rather walk!'"

An Ancient River. In Long Island sound, not far from the north shore of the island, is clearly defined the channel of an ancient river. As shown by the United States coast survey, it is a gorge, having a depth of about sixty feet below the general floor of the sound on either side of it. The gorge or channel was cut into the bedrock of gneiss, the erosion of which is exceedingly slow.

A Nice Friend. Markley—You're a nice friend to have. Why didn't you lend Burroughs the $5 he wanted?

Kraft—Why should I? Markley—To save me. You must have realized that he knew if he didn't get it from you he would from me. You've practically robbed me of that "Aver."—Philadelphia Press.

To Relieve the Monotony. "You ought to have a change of scene," said the physician. "But, my dear sir," protested the patient, "I am a traveling man by profession."

A Game of Leapfrog.

Napoleon Bonaparte, as is well known, was in the habit of walking with his arms crossed upon his chest and his head slightly bent forward. Isabeau, the painter, was at Malmation, and he and some of the first council's aids—camp were having a game of leapfrog on the lawn. Isabeau had already jumped over the heads of a path of them, when at the turning of a path he espied the last player, who, in the requisite position, seemed to be waiting for the ordeal. Isabeau pursued his course without looking, but took his flight so badly as only to reach the other's shoulder, and both rolled over and over in the sand.

To Isabeau's consternation, his supposed fellow player turned out to be Bonaparte, who got up, foaming at the mouth with anger, and, drawing his sword, pounced upon the unfortunate artist. Isabeau, luckily for himself, better at running than at leaping, took to his heels and, jumping the ditches dividing the property from the highroad, got over the wall and never stopped until, breathless, he reached the gates of the Tuilleries.

Isabeau, it was added, went immediately to Mme. Bonaparte's apartments, and she, after having laughed at the mishap, advised him to lie low for a little while.

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip. Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters, and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wait for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then, when this pious duty is performed, they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living.

Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors, because it is not customary to exchange visits as in our country.—Exchange.

Different Kinds of Feet. As to national characteristics in feet, it may be said that the French foot is narrow and long. The Spanish foot is small and elegantly curved—thanks to its Moorish blood—corresponding to the Castilian pride of being "high in the instep." The Arab's foot is proverbial for its high arch. The Koran says that a stream of water can run under the true Arab's foot without touching it. The foot of the Scotch is high and thick; that of the Irish flat and square, the English short and fleshy. When Athens was in her zenith, the Greek foot was the most perfectly formed and exactly proportioned of that of any of the human race. Swedes, Norwegians and Germans have the largest feet, Americans the smallest. Russian toes are "webbed" to the first joint. Tartarian toes are all the same length.

Queer Coronation Custom. One of the most extraordinary gifts made on the coronation day of Edward I. was that of 500 horses, which had been used by the royal princes and other personages in the procession to Westminster abbey. These horses, all richly caparisoned and harnessed just as they were, were let loose into the very midst of the mob after the banquet in Westminster hall that always succeeded a coronation in those days. The people in the streets were permitted to catch the animals, and to him who caught a horse it and its appointments belonged.—London Chronicle.

A Momentous Game. "How is your story going to end?" asked the publisher, who had dropped in to see the gifted author.

"That will be decided by the poker game I'm going to play this evening," said the gifted author. "If I win, the story will end with the hero and heroine marrying and everybody happy. If I lose, I shall kill off the hero, send the heroine to a nunnery and fill the last chapter just as full of misery as it can stick."—Chicago Tribune.

His Only Chance. Kindly Old Gentleman—Why do you carry that umbrella, little boy? It's not raining.

"No, sir." "And the sun's not shining?" "No, sir."

"Then why do you carry it?" "Well, when it's raining pa wants it, and when the sun's shining pa wants it, and it's only this kinder weather I can get to use it at all."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Winning Her Papa. She—When you go to ask papa, the first thing he will do will be to accuse you of seeking my hand merely to become his son-in-law.

He—Yes? And then— "And then you must agree with him. He's a lot prouder of himself than he is of me."

The Chief End. "What?" inquired the student, "do you regard as the chief end of man?" "Well," answered the professor, "it depends upon what you want the man for. If you want him to do brain work it's his head, and if you want him to run errands it's his feet."
