TRAGICAL DEATH NEAR JASPER

Frank Kirkland Drowned in a Whirlpool Last Saturday Afternoon.

Saturday afternoon Frank Kirkland, who was engaged with a crew conducting a drive of shingle bolts down the river to Springfield, met with an accident resulting in his death by drowning. Near Jasper the bolts became clogged in a deep, swirling eddy. Kirkland was alone but he attempted to relieve the congestion and fell into the water. He kept himself afloat for about an hour, calling for his mates to helf him. The drivers were accustomed to yelling at their work and they could not distinguish his cries of distress. Finally he succumbed to exhaustion and sank. As he went down the second time one of his companions saw his arms and gave the alarm—too late to recover the body in time to restore life.

Undertaker J W Kays was called to meet the body at Springfield from whence B A Washburne and Jas Clark had gone for the body. It was brought to Eugene about mininght last night and shipped to Elgin, Oregon, where his relatives reside.

Harry Kirkland, brother of the deceased, accompanied the body. Jas Clark, of Springfield, uncle of the unfortunate man, went as far as Portland

The young man was aged 21 years, was industrious, steady and quite popular with all who knew him. A number of his fellow workers came down with the body from Jasper. He was a Woodman.

Another Shooting Accident.

Special to the Guard.

CRESWELL, August 18.—There was much sorrow in the family of John Guiley near Creswell Saturday, by the accidental shooting of their dog, Carlo. The boys were out on the river hauling wood, when the dog got after a skunk under a drift of logs. Dale, the oldest boy, being on the opposite side, mistook the dog's nose for the skunk and wounded him so that he had to be killed. He was a valuable dog. His reputation was widely known. John says he can never be replaced even though he might get a thousand dogs.

Not a Coffin-box.

This morning at the depot a long box was hauled up and the bystanders wondered whose body was being shipped. It was a huge box of sample grain, grasses, fruit, etc, prepared by the Willamette Valley Land Company as an exhibit of Lane county products for the Nebraska state fair. It will do good service for the county and state. The only similarity to a "dead box" was its shape.
