RAGTIME ROMANCE

By CECILY ALLEN

Copyright, 1905, by C. S. Richardson

Holla, mah ragtime girl!
Holla, mah ragtime girl!

In the twinkling of an eye pandemonium reigned in the sewing room of St. Agatha's mission. Twenty-two small girls dropped felts, French seams and buttonholes in a wild rush for the open windows and their first love—the street piano man.

The pretty teacher was far too tender hearted to stem the logic. So little music could come into the lives of these slum children. Why deny them this pleasure? So she quietly gathered up the scattered pieces of unbleached muslin, smiling as she softly hummed the air which came clanging and clanking from the street below.

"O—Miss Grace—come an' see. He ain't got no monkey. He's got a man—a real live swell too!"

The Italian displayed his small, gleaming teeth, as he gazed up at the children, crowding upon the fire escape. The teachers in these missions—he had heard of them. They lived on the avenue. They wore furs and violets, and always they gave their pupils for the street musicians a nickel, perhaps even a dime.

Grace Byrne slipped ten pennies into the hands of as many eager gosses, then leaned over their wriggling, excited little figures to catch a glimpse of the extra attraction. In the center of a gaping circle was a well built fellow from her own walk of life—a carefully groomed chap, too, he was, clad in the conventional frock coat, gray trousers, silk hat and modish gloves. And he was dancing, actually dancing to that frightful ragtime music. A loud ruffian rose from the circle of slum denizens, and Grace leaned farther out the window, to the discomfort of herself and several smaller forms whose owners would not give way even for "teacher."

"Holla! Holla!" screamed the piano in final triumph. The young man stopped dancing, whipped his polished hat from his shapely head and deliberately held it toward the gaping, laughing crowd.

"Oh, teacher, give us some more pennies—quick! See, he's goin' away, an' he's so funny! Jes' a couple, please!"

But Grace had stumbled back to her table and was sitting there now, with her white face half hidden in her slender hands.

The children, awed by her silence and pallor, settled quietly to their tasks. In a mechanical fashion Grace directed the remainder of the afternoon's work, and finally each pupil, armed with a slice of warm gingerbread and murmuring "Goodby, teacher," marched from the room.

The teacher walked back to the window and looked down drearily upon the narrow street. Again she seemed to hear the ragtime air which to her would henceforth sound like a misereur. Again she saw the outstretched hand of the man who passed the hat, the flushed face of the man to whom her heart and hand were pledged.

What had happened? She had known Fred Yerkes for years. Their love affair had started during their first term in the dancing class, but she had not known this—that he was a goodly fellow. She had always said that no man should want to sign the pledge. His will power should be his only guardian. But this! She recalled his flushed features, his excited eyes, his instinctively the shrink back from the window. Had he seen her as she leaned over her little charges? She forgot that the musician and his incongruous companion had long since rounded the corner and disappeared in the babble of east side tenement life.

The janitor entered the room. He neatly arranged the chairs and tables for the meeting of the boys' club in the evening. Grace drew herself up proudly, donned her wraps and with a few courteous words to the attendant swept out of the mission rooms, feeling that she never wished to see them again.

That evening, as the dinner gong sounded in a certain residence overlooking the park, a young woman with a determined expression on her face and a contradictory trembling in her hands tied up two packages. One was

Look Pleasant, Please.

Photographer C. G. Harlan, of Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he couldn't because he suffered until agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians and medicines failed to help him but he tried Electric Bitters which worked such wonders on him that he declares they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach trouble. Cured for the cure of the stomach, liver and bowels, they build up and give new life to the whole system. Try them, only 50c. Guaranteed by W. L. DeLano.

City Property for Sale

LENDRECK'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.
To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have laid out an addition on the south side of the city and north of Cottage Hill Park (the city and north of Cottage Hill Park) have 120 lots in this addition, and am selling them very low so as to enable everyone to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $40 up.

LEAS SEWARD ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city within a few blocks of Williams street.

LENDRECK'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have a few lots in this addition within a few blocks of the First National Bank.

JOHNSON HILL PARK.
I have 100 lots in this addition. The price is $40 each. We will advance the price soon. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.

LENDRECK'S ADDITION TO COLLEGE HILL PARK.
We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1500 young fruit trees, about 400 barlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, pines and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out houses, and is a most beautiful suburban place of property. It is known as the Leland Hill farm and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.

I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

New Addition to Eugene.

R F Baker & Co have platted the R F Scott land consisting of 32 lots situated two blocks south of the Patterson school building. These are desirable lots and are for sale at reasonable prices. For further information call on
