THE STRANGER OF TOWER HILL

(Original)
In the reign of Bloody Mary there lived near Tower Hill, in London, an armor maker named Cronin. His home was kept for him by his only daughter, Cicely, who was of an extremely gentle disposition and withal so tender hearted that she would go out of her way to avoid treading on a worm. She was beloved by her father's assistant, John Gaunt, a plain, honest young fellow, who was respected by all who knew him. Cicely was favorably disposed to John Gaunt, but did not encourage his suit. Indeed she did not know her mind and was fearful of wounding him.

One morning she was going to the Thames to get a bucket of water, and while passing over Tower Hill she met a man sauntering along pensively, as though he bore some weight upon his mind. Cicely was captivated by the stranger's appearance and especially by a certain somberness about him. At the moment they passed each other the Tower clock struck 11. Cicely remembered the hour, and the next day she found herself impelled to take her bucket shortly before 11 to go again to the Thames for water, though she would not acknowledge to herself that she did so in the hope of meeting the stranger. She did meet him, and this time he looked at her with his melancholy eyes and said:

"If you are going to the river for water, I would gladly carry your bucket."
"It is very light," said Cicely, blushing. "It will be heavier when it is full."
The stranger spoke with so soft a voice and so respectfully that Cicely consented, and he walked with her to the river. She purposely told him that her father was Cronin, the armor maker, where she lived and all about herself, hoping that this would cause him to be equally frank with her, but he said nothing of himself, and all Cicely could get from him was that he was employed at the Tower. Nevertheless Cicely went home with her heart in a flutter.

Then came the revolt against the legitimate sovereign, headed by the Duke of Northumberland and aided by his son, Lord Gulliford Dudley, to place the latter's wife, Lady Jane Grey, on the throne. One day Cicely saw armed men hurrying past her house to the Tower, from which suddenly burst forth the smoke of cannon. The advancing host stormed the fortress, swam the moat and, placing ladders against the walls, attempted to scale them—all in vain. The assault was a failure. The men who advocated the pretensions of Lady Jane Grey to the throne were driven off, and her cause was lost.

Soon after Cicely was notified that an attendant was wanted for a distinguished prisoner at the Tower, a woman in distress, who needed some one to wait upon her and soothe her. She followed the messenger, who led her to a room where the prisoner was confined, the Lady Jane Grey.

She whose head had been risked to win a crown was soon to lose that which had been the cause of her trouble. The work of the tender hearted Cicely to comfort, so far as she could, the noble lady who, though scarcely out of her teens, was called upon to play so tragic a part. Cicely read to her, prayed with her, often could not help weeping with her—in short, proved the companion that was needed to keep the condemned lady from despair during the trying period. So occupied was the armor maker's daughter that she never once thought of John Gaunt, though there was something in the gloom hanging over her dear mistress and herself that was constantly bringing up the melancholy stranger she had met on Tower Hill. One day she was informed that John wished to see her, and when she went to him he offered to supply a saw with which she and her mistress might remove two of the bars at the window of the room they occupied, leaving sufficient space for Lady Jane Grey to pass through. John promised to be in the court at the appointed hour with man's attire, assist the noble lady from the window and after she had donned the clothes show her the way out of the Tower grounds.

Cicely hastened to propose the plan to the prisoner. The offer was refused. Lady Jane Grey relied upon such of her adherents as had not been arrested to do all they could for her and did not wish to embarrass them by an attempt which would likely be a failure. But the Duke of Northumberland was in prison, and there was no one else to aid the condemned. The day of execution came at last, and Cicely, with streaming eyes, dressed her mistress for the last time. The image of John Gaunt, who had proved so kind, so thoughtful, offering to risk his life to please her, came up at times before Cicely, alternating with that of her stranger lover, John, seeming typical of hope, the stranger typical of despair.

When all was ready, the mournful procession proceeded from the prison to Tower Hill, where was gathered an immense throng. Cicely supported her mistress, aiding her to mount the steps of the scaffold. There stood a muffled figure, leaning on an ax. Cicely looked from her mistress to the sea of upturned faces, and there, among them, was the sympathetic face of John Gaunt. When her eyes were turned again to her mistress, she was kneeling before the block. The muffled figure threw off his cloak, and there stood the stranger of Tower Hill!

Cicely fainted and was handed down into the arms of John Gaunt. When she came to herself, she threw her arms about his neck and wept.

Encyclopaedia for Sale.

The GUARD offers a ten-volume Americanized Encyclopaedia Britannica for sale. There are 6992 pages of the work, 98 colored maps of states and countries and numerous illustrations. It is durably bound in sheep and has been well used.

In this condensation of the Britannica special pains were taken, as the name indicates, to give special preference to subjects of American interest, at the same time pruning long and prolix articles of all superfluity, though not materially curtailing the presentation of desirable facts.

This encyclopaedia has been in constant use for several years. It is first-class for value for the money. The reason that the office has been supplied with a complete Britannica with a five-volume "American supplement."

The Last Excursion.
The excursion season is drawing to a close and a short time the summer will be over. Recognizing these facts and wishing to give the people one more chance before it is too late, the C. & E. R. R. and Eastern Railroad Co. have decided to run their last through excursion from Detroit to all points west to Newport on Sunday, Aug. 31, 1902, leaving Detroit at 4:30 a.m., arriving at Newport at 11:30, and returning leave Newport at 6:00 p.m., giving six hours of fun and pleasure at the most popular seaside resort in the Northwest. The celebrated band from the U. S. Indian school, Okemaw, of 23 pieces, will play on arrival and departure of the boat and during the day. Special arrangements have been made with Prof. Albert A. Shaw to give one of his famous exhibitions on the bicycle and bicycle on the beach, which together with the surf bathing, boating and open air concerts will be the grand finale of the season.
This is positively the last excursion from Detroit and the fare will be as follows: Detroit to Mill City inclusive $2.50; west of Mill City to Kingston inclusive, $2; west of Kingston to Maxwell inclusive, $1.75; Albany, Corvallis and Pullman, $1.50; west of Pullman to Chilwauk inclusive, $1; all points west of Chilwauk, 75c. These fares are for the round trip. Remember this is the last through excursion of the season.

City Property for Sale

REMARKS' ADDITION TO EUGENE.
To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have laid out an addition on the south side of the city and north of College Hill Park. I have 120 lots in this addition, and am willing them very low so as to enable every one to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $50 up.
ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Willamette street.
WHITAKER'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.
I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.

COLLIER HILL PARK.
I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. I will advance the price soon. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable real estate property in or near the city.
HANDPICK'S ADDITION TO COLLIER HILL PARK.
We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1300 young fruit trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 300 black walnut trees, also apples, plums and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban piece of property. It is known as the Locust Hill farm, and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.
I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

New Addition to Eugene.
R. F. Baker & Co. have platted the R. F. Baker land consisting of 32 lots situated two blocks south of the Patterson school building. These are desirable lots and are for sale at reasonable prices. For further information call on
R. F. BAKER,
Office at No. 6 West Ninth street.
