FOREST RANGERS AND FOREST FIRES.

These forest fires may be set down to the joint effort of Major Ormsby's redoubtable rangers and the timber syndicates that have been looking so faithfully and vaingloriously after their new purchases—Oregonian.

A forest fire is not a raging conflagration of timber and brush from its incipency. It starts from a match or, maybe, from a campfire that has been left burning.

Neither "Mayor Ormsby's redoubtable rangers" nor any possible force of men could stay the flames when once fanned into activity by currents of air.

From personal observation we know that the forest rangers did good work when employed along the McKeone and Military wagon roads.

They were continually passing to and fro, cautioning campers and settlers as to the necessity of being careful with fire. It was not only all they could do, but the best thing that could be done for the preservation of the forests.

Their very presence and authority made men careful, where care counted for, as the start.

A $60,000 GOLD NUGGET.

Samuel Hawkins Napier, who it is said is said to have been the largest nugget of gold ever mined in dead, says a Providence, Rhode Island, paper.

He died alone, deep in the mountains of the West, in the company of a fox dog, 200 miles from any human habitation, in the wilds of the Gaspereau River, Canada.

Napier's rich strike occurred in Australia in 1852. He was a purser on the Melbourne-Liverpool ship when the mad race for the Australian mines suggested the fabled riches.

He joined fortunes with his brother-in-law, and the two went out to the gold country. One day Napier's pick struck solidly upon a metallic mass of large proportions.

The nugget was taken to London, where it was exhibited and finally sold for $60,000.

Napier settled at Bristol, New Brunswick, and became a member of the Provincial Parliament, but his share of the wealth amassed at the Kingowar diggings was lost in speculation.

SMOKIER ONCE BEFORE.

"I never saw anything like this before!" That is how some people are talking about the smoke. We did, and it was but a few summers ago.

That season after heavy rains early in the spring it cleared up and staid clear. And just about the time the farmers were prophesying a failure of crops smoke commenced to cover the valley.

It covered it well, so well that splendid crops were harvested. The sun was shut off from drawing the moisture from the ground. It was so smoky that the trees that skirt the top of Skinner's Butte could not be seen from Williams street.

The smoke is hard to dense now. A rain would be welcomed, not only on account of health and comfort, but as a means of saving much valuable timber that is liable to be destroyed.

The Pringle Review says "the Pringle country presents the unique spectacle of being a wheat market within itself. Here we are within seventy miles of a railroad, and equipped with mills for making the best of flour, and from this part of the world not a bushel of wheat or other grain is exported; but on the contrary better prices prevail constantly for grain than on the railroad lines. Wheat is worth sixty cents a bushel and more the year round, and flour is continually imported from the outside."

The Pringle East Oregonian says Mrs Roosevelt set a good example when she was "not at home" a few days ago in the occasion of a call from the Grand Duke Boris, a first cousin of the czar, he who filled a young woman's slipper with wine and drank from it to her day. It is bad enough for American women to tolerate these acts when they're only naturally crazy, without having to receive them when they are placed far beyond the hope of a lucid moment by intoxicants.

How does this dispatch strike you, no difference what your religious or political prejudices may be?

JOHN WHITE GEARY. American Soldier and Statesman—Eugene's G. A. R. Post Took His Name.

The marriage of Dr John W Geary, notice of which appears in another column, is a reminder that the son of Dr Edward Geary, the latter a former pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Eugene, was named from his uncle, John White Geary, after whom, too, J W Geary, Post G A R, of this city was named. It is an honorable name as the following biographical sketch well attests:

JOHN WHITE GEARY. An American soldier and statesman; born near Mount Pleasant, Westmoreland county of Pennsylvania, Dec 30, 1819. He studied civil engineering and law, and was admitted to the bar, but never practiced. During the Mexican War he was lieutenant colonel of the Second Regiment of Pennsylvania, and for services rendered in the field was made first commander of the City of Mexico, and colonel of his regiment. In 1849 he was appointed first postmaster of San Francisco, and in 1850 was made mayor of that city. In 1856 he was appointed territorial governor of Kansas, and held that office one year. At the beginning of the Civil War he raised the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and during the war commanded in several engagements, notably Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and Look at Mountain. He several times won distinction, and attained the rank by brevet of major general. In 1868 he became governor of Pennsylvania, and held the office for sixteen weeks of his death. He died in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Feb 8, 1873.

In this condensed and of the Britannica special pains were taken, as the name indicates, to give special preference to the life of American interest. At the same time, the volume is a complete encyclopedia of all specialties, though not necessarily containing the presentation of details.

This encyclopedia has been in constant use for several years. It is feared that the sufficient reason that the price has been supplied with a complete Britannica will be a five-volume "American supplement."
