My Uncle From New York.

The last night's work of the Georgia Harper Company at the Parker Saturday evening in the presentation of the irresistibly funny farce-comedy, "My Uncle From New York," was greeted with uproars of laughter and applause. This speaks approval for the production and acting of the company for which it is the purpose of the play. The company was very well liked here. Miss Harper has a place in the play-going public's heart similar to that held by Miss Jessie Shirley and if she comes to Eugene again she will be enthusiastically received.

Brownsville Personals.

BROWNVILLE, Oct 11.—A farewell reception was given by the Native Daughters and the Woodmen Circle at the Masonic Hall last night for Dr I W Starr and family who leave today for Eugene, where they will reside. About 270 persons and invited friends were present. A fine supper was served at midnight.

Rev M T Wire, of Albany, the newly appointed Methodist minister to this place, arrived today and will at once take up his pastoral work.

Settled at Last.

Peace reigns and the Leroy Ross controversy is no more and it is now authoritatively stated that "Other People's Money" company has rearranged its route so as to give one performance here. This has been a successful effort on the part of Manager Ross to maintain his rights and to give his patrons an attraction of known quality and congratulations are due him. It is understood that the date originally contracted for will be played.

Waterville Market.

The last issue of the Waterville Times contains the following:
Holders of the largest and best lots of hops will not take 30 cents for them and as there are few anyway, not much business is doing in consequence. A few sales of small lots are made at 28 to 30 cents. Daniel Livermore sold 10 bales at 29 cents. We have heard of no sales above 30 cents.

Edith Dean entered her Aunt Marcy's room with a great bunch of violets on her jacket. They filled the room with their perfume and seemed the spirit of their wearer, a slender girl with deep blue eyes and a pretty, pensile way of carrying her head. Mrs. Murray greeted her niece affectionately. They were strikingly alike—the same eyes, lips and wavy hair and the same quick, nervous way of speaking.

"How beautiful your violets are!"
"Oh, yes," replied the girl carelessly. "Jimmy always sends me lovely flowers, but I'm getting so tired of violets. I don't see why he didn't get American Beauties instead today."
She tossed her coat carelessly on the couch, crumpling and crushing the violets. Her aunt looked up quickly and then drew the girl to the stool at her side.

"Edith, your words remind me of a story. May I tell it?"
The girl nodded her head delightedly.

"It was in the spring of 1861. I was a gay, spoiled girl, like you, and Langdon Murray, to whom I had been engaged for several months, was my helpless slave. While our social pleasures differed slightly from those of the present day we, too, loved pretty gowns and flowers, so when Langdon promised to send me, for a certain dance, the prettiest flowers he could find I naturally expected something quite handsome in the way of a bouquet. Instead of the roses I had hoped for there came only a bunch of violets, not violets de Parma, like yours, but the simplest of fragrant blossoms. I was in a fine temper, tossed them aside and went to the dance undelivered with my flowers. If Langdon felt hurt, he showed no sign, and his very self restraint annoyed me the more. I was disgracefully pettish all evening and on the way home had little to say to my long suffering escort.

"The next evening he called as usual, and in the meantime mother had rescued the discarded violets and placed them in a vase. He crossed to the piano and touched the half faded flowers whimsically. Then he turned to me with unusual gravity and tenderness.

"So you didn't like my violets, Marcy, dear?"
"Childishly I shook my head."
"I thought, dearest, they were the reflection of your eyes. That's why I chose them. Perhaps, as you don't care for them, I may take a few?"

"Take them, of course," I said nonchalantly.

"No; I want you to give them to me."
"Wonderingly I selected a small bunch and handed them to him. Then I laughed nervously.

"Dear me, Langdon, you look as serious as if you were going to a funeral!"
"To something worse than that, Marcy, dear; to war. And those will remind me of the sweetest girl in the world, my slender, blue-eyed violet, who is going to be brave till I come back."

"A chill crept over me. I saw my pettish folly, my one-sided quarrel, in their true light. What a penitent girl I was, and how complete was our reconciliation, how tender our parting! Then, when he had kissed me goodbye for the last time, I took what was left of the violets and pressed them in this book."

Mrs. Murray opened an old fashioned collection of verses and showed Edith a small bouquet of withered flowers tied with white ribbon.

"You of today cannot realize the horrors of the civil war. Mother and I sewed incessantly for the soldiers. It was all we could do. This labor of love, with frequent letters from Langdon, who was with the western army, kept me alive. Separation had taught me how deep was my love for him.

nothing of his fate, nor could the inquiries instituted by my father solve the mystery. I rallied at fate. I prayed to die. If only I could visit his grave, know where he was sleeping with my violets over his heart, as he had said they should always lie.

"The weeks dragged into months, and then suddenly came news from Nashville that he lay there in the government hospital; with other Federal prisoners he had been recently exchanged, and if I wished to see him alive I must come at once. Of the horrors of that trip and the days among the suffering and dying you can never know, but I nursed Langdon back to life, and when we reached our northern home it was a more sensible, thoughtful woman that he led to the altar, and, my dear, in the first few years of our married life whenever the old thoughtless words rose to my lips I recalled the violets which he had worn over his heart through the battles and the marches, and whenever I became selfish and thought my husband was not doing everything he could to make me happy I would steal away to my room and look into the pages where these withered flowers lay. Violets may be modest, but they can recall memories which no haughty American Beauties can boast."

Edith was very thoughtful as she kissed her aunt and went to her room. There on her tea table the maid had placed a vase filled with American Beauties. She flushed as she looked at them. What had she said to Jimmy about hating violets?

That evening when Jim Barber called on his fiancée Edith was wearing the violets. He elevated his eyebrows slightly, then bent down to kiss the tender, upturned face. Edith was looking thoughtfully pensive.

"I thought you hated violets. Didn't you get the roses this afternoon?" Edith smiled.

"I won't, ah, Jimmy. I do like roses best, but when you send the violets—why—why, that makes them different, you know."

Jim, rather surprised at the sudden tenderness and gentleness of his whimsical sweetheart, held her close to his heart. At last she raised her head and, pulling some violets from her corsage, fastened them on his coat. Again he stooped to kiss her hands as she whispered:

"You don't think, Jimmy, that there's going to be a war—very soon?"
Jimmy, who belonged to the national guard, glanced at her curiously.

"No, dear."
She sighed happily and murmured, "I'm very, very glad."

Fourth Century Shortland.

That shorthand was used in the ancient world is well known, but our information is still scanty, and any addition is welcome. It may therefore be worth knowing that there is in the Armenian "Acts of St. Callistratus" a reference to the employment of stenography. A translation of this is included in Mr. F. C. Conybeare's "Armenian Apology and Acts of Apollonius and Other Monuments of Early Christianity." The account of Callistratus was probably written in the first half of the fourth century. It includes several long addresses of Callistratus to his fellow soldiers in explanation of the mysteries of the new faith for which he and forty-nine of his comrades became martyrs. Perhaps with a view to giving them authority as verbatim reports, the compiler says:

"But there was a certain scribe of the law court who was near to the prison, and he listened to the discourse of Callistratus, and he wrote it down in shorthand on paper and gave it to us, and we set in order with all accuracy the record and outline of his thoughts."

Thackeray's Facial Appearance.

In 1849 or 1850 Charlotte Brontë wrote of Thackeray: "To me the broad brow seems to express intellect. Certain lines about the nose and cheek betray the satirist and the cynic; the mouth indicates a childlike simplicity, perhaps even a degree of irresolution in consistency—weakness, in short, but a weakness not unamiable." And Mr. Motley, writing to his wife in 1858, said: "I believe you have never seen Thackeray. He has the appearance of a colossal infant—smooth, white, shining, ringlet hair, flaxen, also, with advancing years; a roundish face with a little dab of a nose, upon which it is a perpetual wonder how he keeps his spectacles."

This broken nose was always a source of amusement to Thackeray himself. He caricatured it in his drawing, he frequently alluded to it in his speech and in his letters, and he was fond of repeating Douglas Jerrold's remark to a friend's son, "Lord, Thackeray, I hope you won't present the child with your own mug!"

A Tender Hearted Dog.

A sick dog took up his abode in the field behind our house, and after seeing the poor thing lying there for some time I took it food and milk and water. The next day it was still there, and when I was going out to feed it I saw that a small pug was running about it, so I took a whip out with me to drive it away. The pug planted itself between me and the sick dog and barked at me sanely, but at last I drove it away and again gave food and milk and water to my protegee.

The little pug watched me for a few moments, and as soon as he felt quite assured that my intentions toward the sick dog were friendly it ran to me wagging its tail, leaped up to my shoulder and licked my face and hands, nor would it touch the water till the invalid had had all it wanted. I suppose that it was satisfied that its companion was in good hands, for it trotted happily away and did not appear upon the scene again.—Cor. London Spectator.

City Property for Sale
HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO EUGENE.—To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have had an addition on the south side of the city and north of College Hill Park. I have 120 lots in this addition, and am selling them very low so as to enable every one to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $50 up.

ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Willamette street.

WENTWORTH'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.

COLLEGE HILL PARK.—I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.

HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO COLLEGE HILL PARK.—We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1200 young prune trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban piece of property. It is known as the Loomis Hill farm, and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.

I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

Encyclopaedia for Sale.
The GUARD offers a ten-volume Americanized Encyclopaedia Britannica for sale. There are 6002 pages of the work, 96 colored maps of states and countries and numerous illustrations. It is durably bound in sheep and has been well used.

In this condensation of the Britannica special pains were taken, as the name indicates, to give special preference to subjects of American interest, at the same time pruning long and prolix articles of all superfluity, though not materially curtailing the presentation of desirable facts.

This encyclopaedia has been in constant use for several years. It is offered for sale for the sufficient reason that the office has been supplied with a complete Britannica with a five-volume "American Supplement."
