Asleep Amid Flames.

Breaking into a blazing home, some firemen lately dragged the sleeping inmates from death. Fancied security, and death near. It's that way when you neglect coughs and colds. Don't do it. Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption gives perfect protection against all throat, chest and lung trouble. Keep it near and avoid suffering, death and doctor's bills. A teaspoonful stops a late cough, persistent use the most stubborn. Harmless and nice tasting; it's guaranteed to satisfy by W L Delano. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottles free.

A Startling Surprise.

Very few could believe in looking at A T Hoadley, a healthy, robust blacksmith of Tilden, Ind., that for ten years he suffered such tortures from rheumatism as few could endure and live. But a wonderful change followed his taking Electric Bitters. "Two bottles wholly cured me," he writes, "and I have not felt a twinge in over a year." They regulate the kidneys, purify the blood and cure rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, improve digestion and give perfect health. Try them. Only 50 cts at W L DeLano's drug store.

FIRST SUIT ON HOP CONTRACT

Growing out of the Recent Decision by Judge Geo. H. Burnett.

Guard Special Service.

PORTLAND, Nov 21.—Albert Lilienthal and Phil Lilienthal, hop brokers of New York and San Francisco, have brought suit in the United States court at Portland against D W Stearns, of Oakland, Douglas county, to recover on contract for hops made early in the season before the price reached the present high price, it being alleged that the defendants refused to live up to their agreements.

In the case of D W and R L Stearns, it is alleged that they contracted their hops for future delivery at 12½ cents a pound, the crop of their 30 acres being estimated at 30,000 pounds. The plaintiffs allege that $1200 was advanced, but that when the hops were harvested the crop being 30,000 pounds, the defendants refused to sell. They place their loss at $5551, estimating it on a basis of hops being worth 27 cents a pound.

In the case of A F Stearns, it is claimed that his crop amounts to 15,000 pounds and the loss to the plaintiffs by reason of the increase in price since the contract was made is $4671.

This is the first suit over this year's hop contracts to be brought in the federal court. The right to institute the proceedings in that court belongs to the plaintiffs, who are non-residents of the state. Another fact in this connection is that the validity of these hop contracts has not been passed on by this higher tribunal.

Tamed Fierce Tiger

Trainer's Thrilling Battle With A Ferocious Beast

Frank C. Bostock, the famous trainer of wild beasts, says that the wildest animal he ever trained came near getting the best of him, but once conquered was forever after subject to his master, but to him alone. Mr. Bostock thus describes the contest between man and beast for mastery:

'This animal was Delhi, a tiger of the royal Bengal species, as beautiful an animal as ever trod the jungle in search of prey and as vicious as though he were possessed of a horde of evil spirits.

At last one day I entered his cage, armed with a shield, such as trainers sometimes use, while in my right hand I carried a good, heavy club made of leather and filled with shot. Delhi welcomed me with a roar and leaped toward me. He landed upon the shield, which I held in my left hand, and at the same instant the heavy club landed on Delhi's skull. The beast fell to the floor half dazed, but quickly prepared for another spring.

Again he met the shield and the club, and again he tumbled to the floor of the cage. This time I did not wait for him to recover, but walked out of the cage.

On the day following when I visited Delhi's cage I was met with snarls of mingled hate and fear. I decided it would be time enough to let Delhi know I could be kind after I had fully demonstrated the fact that I could meet brute strength with strength even superior to his own. This time I discarded the shield and the club and armed myself with a whip.

I entered the cage, and Delhi sprang to meet me. An animal of this kind always springs for the throat of his intended victim, and as I am a man of more than ordinary stature Delhi's leap gave me ample room to dodge him. I dropped on one knee as the great body passed over me.

I turned almost as soon as I dropped and sprang to the end of the cage against which Delhi dashed himself, and before the beast could turn for a second attack I seized him by the scruff of the neck and the loose skin of his back, raised him the full height of the cage and hurled him to the floor. The animal, though half stunned, turned and made a second leap. Again I dodged him, again I picked him up, and again I threw him to the floor of the cage. I knew that by this time the beast would be thoroughly frightened, so I drew the whip and laid on until I had the animal racing around the cage with howls and screams of pain.

When I entered the cage the day following, it was a totally different animal that came cringingly forward to meet me.

I found him to be all that I expected he would be—one of the most intelligent beasts I had met in my lifelong association with animals—and he learned so rapidly that finally I decided that he, with a pair of specially clever lionesses and a Great Dane, would make one of the cleverest group acts ever seen in the world.

Before entering the arena with them I had mapped out in my mind a grouping in which Delhi was to be the apex of a small pyramid. I had placed in position a set of steps upon which this grouping was to be made, and it was with great difficulty that I induced Delhi to take his position at the top. Once he was there, however, I turned my attention to the lionesses. One of these was a particularly affectionate creature of whom I was very fond, and as she walked over to take her position I stooped to pat her upon the head. There was a roar from Delhi, perched on the steps above me, and the great brute sprang upon my back and shoulder, tearing my clothing into shreds and drawing the blood from several ugly looking gashes which his sharp claws inflicted.

I turned on the beast with my whip, and after administering a few sharp lashes he again was in complete submission.

Delhi was jealous!

This was the end of Delhi's career as a performing animal. He would never act with other beasts.

Encyclopaedia for Sale.

The GUARD offers a ten-volume Americanized Encyclopaedia Britannica for sale. There are 6902 pages of the work, 96 colored maps of states and countries and numerous illustrations. It is durably bound in sheep and has been well used.

In this condensation of the Britanica especial pains were taken, as the name indicates, to give special preference to subjects of American interest, at the same time pruning long and prolix articles of all superfluity, though not materially curtailing the presentation of desirable facts.

This encyclopaedia has been in constant use for several years. It is offered for sale for the sufficient reason that the office has been supplied with a complete Britannica with a five-volume 'American supplement."
