NOT A RELIEF BUT A CURE

Yerington, Nev, Oct 20, 1902.

Dr C A Perrin,
Helena, Mont.

Dear Sir:—

I have nearly finished the former bottle and am practically well. My case was one most physicans would have pronounced incurable. My appetite is good, have gained 10 pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me. One of the bottles I send for this time is for a friend and the other for myself as I do not intend to be without it.

Very truly yours,
T R Harris.

Venezuela and Her Troubles

LIKE most South American republics, Venezuela is usually in the throes of something. If she doesn't have a revolution on hand at home, she is having trouble with a war lord or is twisting a lion's tail. Just at present she has the doubtful enjoyment of all three. Owing to expensive revolutions, a chronic condition of poverty and a somewhat reckless and impulsive president the country is unable and unwilling to pay the claims various powers of Europe have presented for damages to the property of their citizens. The result is that these powers, weary of waiting, are endeavoring by force of arms to collect the amounts due or to punish Venezuela for her neglect to settle.

In this crisis Venezuela is somewhat complacent because she is pretty well informed concerning the Monroe doctrine and is confident that if England, Germany and the other powers go far enough in their aggressions they will find themselves face to face with the United States government. President Castro has not forgotten the strenuous days of 1895 when England refused to arbitrate the boundary dispute with his country and President Cleveland's bellicose message caused Great Britain to reverse her position and arbitrate.

Venezuela is one of the most remarkable and interesting countries in the world. Owing to her latitude and the height of her mountains she has a climate that ranges through all the degrees of temperature from torrid to arctic. The population is about 2,500,000 and consists in the main of Caribs, or native Indians; negroes and mixed races. Of the total population but 1 per cent is white, and that is mostly grouped in three cities, the principal one of which is Caracas, the capital.

Many of the Caribs are lake dwellers and inhabit houses elevated on piles above the surface of the lakes.

If it is true that every boy in the United States aspires to be president, the same is equally true of Venezuela. The people dearly love a revolution, dearly love to overturn one president—who is usually a dictator—and seat another in his place. The country is full of scheming politicians and soldiers of fortune, and the result is that there is hardly a time when a revolution is not either in progress or being fomented.

For years past, too, Venezuela and her neighbor, Colombia, have been at odds, and war has been repeatedly threatened. Of late the tension has been particularly keen because Castro has been ambitious to unite Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador and one or two other countries in a grand confederation to be called the United States of South America and become president of the new aggregation of states.

The Venezuelans have so many troubles that it is a relief to turn to the more pleasing aspects of their daily life.

Despite their fondness for revolution —which possibly is due to abuse of power by some of their presidents—the Venezuelans are the most courteous people that can be imagined. Impoliteness is unpardonable. The clerk with whom you deal over his counter expresses his wish that you may live long and prosper and thanks you gratefully for giving him the pleasure of showing his goods, whether you purchase anything or not. When a gentleman meets a lady, be she his sweetheart or his grandmother, he always says he "is lying at her feet," and he would rather be shot than be guilty of passing before her. They are not the semibarbarians which some people in the northern continent suppose. They have accomplishments which ought to make the rest of America ashamed. Usually they are able to speak three or four languages, have refined taste in art and music, and, while they lack ingenuity and usually do things in the hardest way, they are nevertheless possessed of the keenest perceptive faculties and almost seem to read your thoughts. It is not difficult to make known your wants even if you cannot understand a word of their language. They do not allow smoking in the street cars and public places, as in Mexico and Havana, and, although it is the privilege of the masculine gender to stare at the feminine with all the eyes they have, the men are never rude and beg the pardon of a beggar when they refuse to give him alms.

They always put the locks upon the wrong door and wrong side up. When they build a house, it seems as if they studied the most difficult mode of construction. They erect solid walls first and then chisel out places for the timbers to rest upon. There are no stoves or chimneys, and charcoal is the only fuel. Gas is produced at $4.50 per thousand feet from American coal, which costs $20 a ton. There is no glass in the windows, but a grating of iron bars keeps out intruders, and heavy wooden shutters keep out the air and light. Such blinds as are common in North America would be the most admirable protection in this country, but no one has ever introduced them, and the people will continue to swelter behind solid shutters until the end of time.

The rooms of houses are not plastered, but the joists are all exposed. The floors are of tile, and gaudy paper is pasted upon the walls of cement and stone. In the court of every house are the most beautiful flowers. Tuberoses grow in great trees, and the oleander is as common as the lilac in New England. The parks look like the botanical gardens of the north and in the evening are always thronged with gentlemen and ladies until a late hour.

The police regulations are very strict. The other day a child was kidnaped in Caracas by a man in a hack. Every coach driver in the city was thrown into prison, and not a wheel was turned until the child was recovered. Drunken men are never seen in the streets. To become intoxicated is to invite yourself to work ten or twenty days in the chain gang, and to see the way in which prisoners are treated is an inducement to be temperate.

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY, U. S. N.

Admiral Dewey is now in command of one of the most powerful fleets ever assembled by the United States, and the ships are but a short distance from Venezuela. Among the vessels are seven battleships, the Kearsarge, Alabama, Massachusetts, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Texas; seven protected cruisers, two unprotected cruisers, two converted cruisers, four gunboats, two converted gunboats, one dispatch boat and a number of torpedo boats, colliers and supply ships. The total fleet numbers sixty-one ships.
