"I am pleased to give my experience with Wine of Cardui as I am very grateful for its help. After my first baby was born I could not seem to regain my strength, although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of going better I grew weaker every day. My husband came home one evening with some Wine of Cardui and insisted that I take it for a week and see what it would do for me. As he seemed to have so much faith in it I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui, in restoring the organs of generation, restores mothers of women who had given up hope of ever becoming mothers. Wine of Cardui will cure almost any case of barrenness, except cases of organic trouble. How can you restore to life such a remedy that promises relief from suffering? Wine of Cardui simply makes you a strong woman, and strong, healthy women do not suffer. They look forward to motherhood with joy.

WORK OF HON. HENRY GILFRY

Henry H. Gilfry, formerly a Eugene man, now of Washington, D. C., well known over Oregon; who owns a farm near Creswell in his county and considers it as his home place, is the subject of a writeup in the Oregonian by its special correspondent at Washington, D. C. Mr. Gilfry is a cousin of Hon. T. G. Hendricks, a brother of the well known Gilfry family of this county, and has a host of friends throughout the county. It says:

"Henry H. Gilfry, of Oregon, is legislative clerk of the United States senate; has held governmental office in Washington longer than any other Oregonian now here. He came to this city in June, 1879, and went to the clerk's desk of the senate on the first of the following December, where he has served continuously ever since. In those days Mr. Gilfry was legislative clerk and reading clerk combined, but of late, so great became the necessity of a reading clerk, that a special officer was appointed for that purpose, and now the Oregon man is relieved from all reading, save from an occasional roll call.

The office of legislative clerk is one of the most exacting, if not the most exacting, connected with the senate. Accuracy is demanded above all things. Primarily, Mr. Gilfry has charge of the official copies of all pending bills, both those introduced in the house and in the senate. When such bills are called for consideration, he must be in attendance and accurately record all amendments that are adopted and any changes of phraseology that may be ordered. Even down to punctuation, he must follow the dictates of the senate. The importance of this is recognized when it is known that the omission of a single comma in a bill so important as a tariff measure may change the purport of a bill, and mean thousands of dollars to the Government or to commercial interests. In Mr. Gilfry's time the senate has passed five tariff bills, the act of 1881, known as the tariff commission bill, the Mills bill, which never became a law; the Dingley bill, the Wilson bill and the McKinley bill. It was upon Mr. Gilfry that the senate relied for having these bills properly enrolled and signed by the President of the senate. No one who has not been present in the senate when important measures are being amended, after a sharp contest, can appreciate the difficulty of keeping up with the proceedings and telling accurately just what amendments are adopted, and what objections are made, how they are adopted, so complicated do the proceedings become. There are few men holding public office who can point to so clean and creditable a record as Mr. Gilfry can. It is said that never, during his time, has a single bill been erroneously engrossed, and what is equally creditable, during the 23 years and more of his service he has been absent from his desk but three days, and then on account of illness. In that long period he has been late but once, and that when the senate, by special order, convened at 11 o'clock, instead of at noon as is customary, and even on that occasion he was at his desk a few minutes after. He had overlooked the special order of the day before.
