"MANYWHERE"

Now a man there was, and he coined a word.

From his "hypnotic" dictionary, it described a premature blast, I've heard, And the word it was "manywhere."

But he knew ere he hit of a brand new word, He had no other come across "anywhere."

That described what he got—"manywhere."

So another man with a facile pen Wrote a song on the word "manywhere." And he hoped he'd get a check "anywhere."

For his short "manywhere" rhyme, But response to his hope was not "anywhere."

As a fact, it was "nonsensical"— But he got a rejection that made him sick, And they put out his trunk "anywhere."

"Manywhere" I have did on this "muchly" thought; "Manywhere" has my poor brain whirled; And I've dreamed "daintily" that I really ought, Give a "brannew" word to the world; But I've made "upminded" that it ain't no use.

It's a thankless old job anyhow; I will make "nones" word for a world's abuse; We have got "manywhere" of 'em now! —Baltimore News.

—Leslie's Weekly.

The Trail Was Changed.

"You should endeavor to keep up with the times," we say to the seedy stranger.

"Sir," retorts the seedy stranger, "at one time I was way ahead of the times, and, to my sorrow, the times refused to follow my trail, but turned to one side, leaving me marooned, as you see."

Continuing, he would have expatiated upon his perpetual motion machine, but we hurried on.—Judge.

Household Economy.

Mrs. Ferguson—George, when you smoke so much in the house I have to get the curtains washed every month. Think how expensive that is!

Mr. Ferguson—Yes, but I'm getting my cigars at half price nowadays. Think how much money we're saving that way!—Richmond Dispatch.

It Was So Funny.

"Isn't it funny," gurgled the cheerful idiot, "that one has to raise one's voice in order to call down cellar?"

"Not any funnier," cackled the brain fever inmate, "than the fact that the most essential part of a fellow's bringing up is an occasional calling down." —Baltimore American.

Really No Secret.

Enthusiast—How do I like his playing? Why, I think he is one of the greatest pianists I ever heard. What is the reason he isn't famous?

Critic—Well, he has only a plain American name, and musical people, you know, resent that.—Chicago Tribune.

A Deep Thought.

"In a brown study, eh?"

"Yes, I was just thinking."

"Thinking what?"

"I was just wondering why a fellow never has as much trouble borrowing trouble as the trouble he has borrowing other things."—Philadelphia Press.

"Chuckage."

Brown—What we call baggage the English call chuckage. Which word do you think the more appropriate?

White—Considering how trucks are created by the railroad men I should say the right word is chuckage.—Boston Transcript.

It Depends.

"Do you think that a billion dollars is too much for any man to have?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "that is, for any other man to have." —Washington Evening Star.

Kindred Spirit.

The Toucher—Ah, sir, I know you're just a hungry vagabond, sir! Well, you know how it feels to be hungry yourself, sir!

Kind Gent—I do, poor fellow—I do! My wife is a cooking school graduate!

—Chicago News.

Very Healthy, Apparently

Charlie Youngblood had been caught in rather a confused account of his whereabouts the night previous. His wife accepted the statement with some misgivings, but all the next day his conscience troubled him, and in order to square himself he stopped on his way up home and bought a copy of Crawford's last book. After dinner they sat down in the library and he commenced his perusal aloud. As he proceeded he felt himself growing more and more satisfied. At last he encountered this passage:

"If the girl loved her mother, and she really did, it was largely because her mother was so perfectly truthful. Cynical people called her perfectly honest and said that her veracity would have amounted to a disease of the mind if she had possessed any, but that since she did not it was probably a form of degeneration, because all perfectly healthy human beings lied naturally."

"Pardon the interruption, Charlie, but how thankful you should be that you have always possessed such magnificent, robust health." —New York Times.

A Child of Fortune.

"Did you see it on to de fact of Dusty's narrer escape?"

"Naw. What was it—did he outrun de cop?"

"It was dis way: He was sentenced to free mont in de workhouse, an' de judge changed his mind an' made it free mont in jail."

"Dat guy never did have nothin' but luck. Why, only day before yesterday he was eatin' a handout on de back porch w'en a kid of de family took a tumble into de cellar. De lady run to look after de kid, an' dere was 'ree mince pies settin' out coolin' on de ice chest." —Kansas City Journal.

His New Hope.

"Now, look here," said the obtuse collector, "I'm not going to be put off any more. I want that $5, and I'm going to have it before I leave this office."

"Say," the other man replied, with sudden hopefulness as he turned from the window, where he had been looking sadly out at the cold, bleak world, "have you made any arrangement for having your meals sent up? If so, I hope you'll be kind enough to ask a fellow to sit down and take a bite now and then." —Chicago Record-Herald.

He Tumbled.

"Why did Tom give up his study of geometry?"

"You see, he climbed so far up his family tree that he caught sight of an ape in the upper branches." —New York Times.

Saved Him.

"I did one charitable act today," remarked the baldheaded druggist as he sat down to dinner.

"I'm glad to hear it, dear," rejoined his wife. "Tell me all about it."

"Oh, there isn't much to tell," replied the pill coupler. "One of my clerks wanted an increase in salary, so he could get married, and I refused to give it to him." —Baltimore Sun.

North and South.

North American—I am a daughter of the Revolution. I suppose you do not have anything of that kind in your country.

South American—Oh, yes; but the revolutions are so common in our country it is considered vulgar to have any connection with them.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Quotations.

In the window of the butcher shop hung half a dozen dressed rabbits. Dobbins (sticking his head in at the door)—What are you paying for cats now?

Butcher (without looking up from the package he was addressing)—Oh, about seven cents per.—Kansas City Journal.

Very Strange.

"Yes, we're engaged," said Mr. Soght.

"I recall very vividly now that the first night I met her I dreamed of kissing her. Strange, wasn't it?"

"Yes," replied Miss Soght; "I should think that would be the last thing you'd dream of." —Philadelphia Press.

Contrast.

The man who's gloomy and morose He always short of friends; He seldom meets a neighbor who A cordial hand extends.

His children learn to fear him and His wife seldom when he's by; And even the wife, who loves him much, Regards him with a sigh.

But he who always wears a smile Is always popular; His friends make haste to greet him when They see him from afar; They welcome him with pleasant smiles, And then they whisper in his ear, "Lend me ten dollars, please!" —Bismarck Journal.
