MARION HOP CROP SUFFERS
Growers in Vicinity of Woodburn in Hard Luck
Honeydew and Lice Are Taking the Crop—Only About a Third Are Spraying

The Oregonian's commercial editor writes news for the hop dealers. For several days past he has reported the hop lice as about exterminated, when facts are that they are on the increase except in sprayer yards. The Oregonian's office man also reports bottom land hops the worst, when the facts are just the reverse.
Here is a dispatch from Woodburn in yesterday's Oregonian that shows true conditions as they exist. The report is written by a hop dealer whose word is authentic and unprejudiced:
Woodburn, Or., July 11.—An examination of hopyards in this section discloses the fact that at no time in the history of hopraising in Marion county has the outlook for the partial or entire destruction of the growing crop by lice and honeydew been so alarming.
Charles Kaensting, who owns one of the best yards in this section, says: "The past few days of hot weather has not killed the lice or dried up the honeydew on the vines. On the contrary, lice and honeydew are rapidly increasing and the present prospect for a crop is very gloomy."
John Kennedy, owner of one of the largest yards in this end of the county, has this to say: "Never have I seen such terrible ravages in the hop fields of Marion county by lice and honeydew. All the spraying possible cannot save growers from large losses in the output at harvest. I have examined many yards and they are all the same—alive with vermin and covered with honeydew."
Growers are having difficulty in securing quassa chips and whale oil soap for spraying purposes, the demand being so great as to curtail the supply. Dealers have advanced the price of quassa chips 1½ cents per pound and higher prices are threatened. Not one third of the growers are spraying the present crop, not being provided with the necessary materials and equipments.

B.-K. CO.'S HARRISBURG MILL
Old Building Being Put in Shape for an Excelsior Factory

Last Saturday Messrs. R. A. Booth, John Kelly, James Tofts and Geo. Catching, of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, came down from Eugene and drove up to the old mill dam and took some measurements preparatory to rebuilding the dam or replacing it with a new one, says the Harrisburg Bulletin. They did not give out much information regarding their future plans, except that the mill would be leased to the Eugene excelsior people, who have a couple of thousand cords of excelsior wood corded up near the mill. When the dam is put in shape again and the water is turned in the race the mill will be repaired and machinery for the making of excelsior will be installed and the wood on hand will be worked up.

FIFTY THOUSAND AT ELKS' REUNION
Buffalo, July 12.—The 50,000 Elks attending the annual reunion of the B. P. O. E., and double that number of visitors, early today began to make preparations for the grand parade of marching clubs. The police had stretched wire lines on both sides of the streets along the line of march, on which traffic was closed while the parade passed. Great plans had been made to make the parade memorable in the history of Elkdom. Many of the individual lodges had spent as high as $5000 for their costumes and outfits for the occasion, each bent on capturing the prize offered for the best showing.

HARVESTING IN UMATILLA
Pendleton, Or., July 12.—Monday saw the real commencement of harvest in Umatilla county, and there are several crews running in the southern part of the county. In the northeastern portion of the county the grain is hardly yet ripe enough to harvest, and the crews will not commence work in that district for at least ten days. Hot winds which prevailed throughout the county Sunday are reported to have slightly damaged the spring grain, but the fall wheat is so far advanced that it escaped all damage.

A delightful shower this morning. It settled the dust in some places, while in others the rain was too light for that.
