AN INDEPENDENT PAPER.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 20

An exchange says a man never gets too old to stop and look at a window display of toilers—and might have added other displays thereof.

A prairie fire in January? That was just what Western Nebraska had yesterday when three hundred square miles of territory were swept by fire, and many farm and ranch houses burned and much livestock killed.

Published statistics at Tokio show nearly a million—to be exact 900,000—famine-stricken persons in Northern Japan. Awful! Why don't Japan feed them? She had or got millions to spend for war—why not feed her starving people?

Ivan Balensuk, 103 years old, released from an imprisonment of 50 years in a Hungarian prison the other day, tearfully protested against being turned out. He at once committed another crime in order to be re-imprisoned. The prison was his home, his only home.

Some big department stores are using music as a drawing card. They frequently have a complete orchestra, and the music is sometimes of a high class, although as a rule it is generally of various kinds, in order that it may please all conditions of people. The question as to whether the free concerts pay is the vital one, and the department store managers say it does.

In a raid on a gambling game at Portland the other day, Sheriff Word is reported as finding a half barrel of torn cards, besides glasses and bottles in the room. Sure it must have been a poker game, at least those are prominent accessories. Now if the sheriff can find some one who heard sounds of mingled profanity and merriment leading from the room—from loser and winner—he may rest assured it was poker.

One of the big New York papers has been singularly imposed upon. Under the head of "Gastronomic Artists in the Kitchens of the Rich" the other day it printed a portrait of a rather distinguished attaché of the French legation at Washington, also of a former second secretary of the Russian embassy, who last summer was one of the Russian deputation to the Portsmouth peace conference. We venture to say there was some choice swearing or use of expletives in that office when the disclosure came.

of ague and malaria can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters.
