THURSDAY, APRIL 12

A Plain Duty

Under circumstances existing now there is no reason for the factional differences that have beset this city for the past few months to exist any longer.

The water company offers to sell its plant to the city and on terms that seem to be very fair. They offer the city to pick a competent engineer, the company to do likewise, and then a third to be picked by the two selected by the contestants and after going over the matter to abide by their decision.

This seems to be a way out of the present dilemma, one that is agreeable to all and leaves the city in total possession of its water system.

At the same time it eliminates all contentions and opposition. If the water system is placed in the hands of a commission and under civil service rules, without having any competition, practically the entire voice of our citizens will be unanimous for municipal ownership under such conditions.

The objection made and the entire fight against city ownership has been, not against municipal ownership, but against placing in a system in competition with the present plant and having no set plan for a commission or civil service regulations for the same.

As the Guard has stated before, the water company should be given a fair, square deal and paid what its plant is worth reasonably, but the people's interests must be protected and no excessive price would be tolerated.

The company states that all it desires is the money it is out on the proposition, and if the majority believes it better not to arbitrate it is possible the company would make a flat rate offer so one or the other could be accepted.

The Master and the Fraud

Prophet Dowle says the Zion millions "belong" to him, not to the church. It is comforting to turn from this arch fraud to another character that whatever may be thought of his divinity or the creeds woven from his life and sayings, stands out the fairest, noblest personality of human history.

And a certain scribe came and said unto him, "Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." And Jesus saith unto him, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

A cynic says those women who make their hats say they bought them; those women who can't make them, but have to buy them, say they make them.

The immense volume of flame from Vesuvius is described as curving outward as it ascends, a gigantic curved, flaming hood over every side. It were worth taking chances to see such a sight—the opportunity of a lifetime.

The Scientific American of March 28 has this statement, of interest just now in Eugene, where wells take their water from loose gravel: "The highest recorded velocity of underground water is said to be 144 feet in twenty-four hours. The new record is for water flowing through gravel near Tucson, Arizona. The observations were made during the last Christmas holidays by Mr. H. C. Wood, of the department of mathematics of the University of Wisconsin." The Guard is surprised, but accepts the statement coming from such authority as to the truth. We would not have guessed it less than a mile.

ALLEN EATON FOR UTA REPRESENTATIVE

We quote from the University Weekly a part of an article concerning Allen Eaton, the last candidate to enter the Republican race for nomination for state representative. Mr. Eaton is the youngest man in the race, a native son of Oregon, and is a man of family and well known throughout the county. The article says:

Members of the faculty and some of the Eugene people remember well the circumstances under which Mr. Eaton pursued his studies here. They testify to the heartiness with which he sought every kind of honest employment for his unoccupied hours on school days, for Saturday, and during the short as well as the long vacations in order to support himself. He was brought up to believe in the essential nobility of labor, and was never ashamed to be seen by classmates or teachers engaged upon street work, grubbing or cutting up trees, painting houses or milking cows.

In 1901-02 Mr. Eaton was leader of the University of Oregon debating team which won the great victory over the University of Washington at Seattle. The judges of this contest were all Seattle men, yet, largely through Mr. Eaton's splendid generalship in handling the work of his team and his own masterly closing address, the decision in our favor was unanimous. It gave Oregon the debating championship of the Northwest for that year.

Mr. Eaton's interest in politics is just as spontaneous as his interest in good books, fine paintings and statuary. Those who know him best understand full well that he cannot help devoting some attention to public affairs, for he believes fully with President Roosevelt and an increasing number of our best American citizens, that those things which affect the welfare of all should receive the consideration of all. To him public activity means emphatically public service. He has an inborn hatred of everything that savors of corruption and self-seeking in politics; his is that militant type of honesty which, thanks to Roosevelt, Jerome, Folk and La Follette, is at last becoming fashionable in American public life.

Mr. Eaton's friends, some of whom labored long and arduously to induce him to take this step, are delighted with his candidacy. They see in him their ideal of what the people's representative should be—a man of rare ability, never-failing courtesy and tactfulness, the earnest, determined champion of all right measures and the fearless enemy of graft in every form.

In 1903 Mr. Eaton married into one of our oldest and best-known pioneer families, his wife being the daughter of Benjamin F. Dorris, the present city recorder of Eugene. They have one child.
