PRESS AND PUBLIC ALIKE DECLARE THAT CRESTON CLARKE
"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

Provides by far the Best Entertainment of the Season
WHAT ONE WELL-KNOWN CRITIC SAYS:
"Mr. Clarke is a polished actor. He is one of the very few serious players entirely bearable in a roll calling for a continuous foreign accent. Mr.
Clarke sustains the dialect of this amiable young Frenchman without once becoming bored. He does not overdo it. He never employs it at the expense of clarity.
His vocal equipment is always adequate. And he has the bearing of a Duke of Orleans who can only imperfectly disguise his royal graces. He manages a role as neatly as he manages the laces at his waist. There is more than dandyism in his study of Beaucaire, and never a note of revolting effeminacy. Delicacy, wit and tenderness are abundant in Mr. Clarke's portraiture. His magnetism sometimes finds telling expression in a smile, and his slight figure and lean face happily lend themselves to the youthfulness of the character.—Ashton Review in San Francisco Examiner.

LOU BEAUCHAMP GETS WRONG COAT

Noted Humorist Arrived in Eugene Clad in an Abbreviated Garment

Lou J. Beauchamp, the noted humorist, who appears at the Eugene theatre tonight, arrived in the city on this morning's early train from the south. He stayed in his room at the Hotel Suedde nearly all day. When his train arrived in Eugene this morning, in his hurry to dress and get his things together, Beauchamp by mistake took the coat of his berthmate instead of his own. The coat seemed to fit all right and the mistake was not noticed until he reached the hotel. Beauchamp is a six-footer and his berthmate was a small man. You can imagine how the coat looks on Beauchamp. He hasn't dared appear on the streets today. An exchange of coats will probably be made further down the valley.

Obituary

Mrs. J. F. Donaldson died at Thurston, Or., April 4, 1906, aged 50 years. She leaves a husband, three sons and one adopted daughter, James, Charles, George and Jessie. She was a loving wife and mother, and leaves a host of friends to mourn their loss.

Early in life she became a Christian and until her death was a faithful and devoted member of the Christian church.

She is sleeping, sweetly sleeping. Can you wish to waken her now? When not a trace of care or sorrow E'er can mark her peaceful brow? Would you wake her from that slumber, Call her from that rest with God, Back on earth to travel with you If the path your feet have trod?

methinks not; though 'tis lonely,
Bow and kiss the hastening rod,
Saying not as I would will it,
But as thou hast, oh my God,
We a thorny path must travel,
For the living, not the dead,
Keep the tears that thou wouldst lavish
O'er that quiet, peaceful head.
A FRIEND.
