SCHEME TO AID ALIENS

Big Terminals Will Be Built For Immigrants Exclusively.

COST OF PROJECT OVER $1,000,000

Five Large Railway Companies Will Each Erect a Building Near Ellis Island—The Structures Will Have Every Form of Convenience—Reform Suggested by Commissioner Robert Watchorn.

Five big terminals, for the exclusive use of the thousands of weary immigrants let through the bars at Ellis Island every day, are to be built by the five big railway companies and their dependent systems doing business with the government, says the New York Tribune. This announcement was made a few days ago after a series of protracted conferences between the representatives of the railroads and the new commissioner of immigration, Robert Watchorn. The erection of such structures will mark a humane reform in the handling of the immigrant that will, it is hoped, protect the ignorant foreigner from the swarm of thieves and confidence men that prey on the unsuspecting newcomer now. It is in line with the straightforward policy of Commissioner Watchorn, who the moment he got on the island determined that there should be some humane reforms made for the benefit of the immigrant.

The erection of an immigrant terminal was one of the reforms planned to be executed as soon as possible. Meanwhile a dozen or more minor reforms, directly affecting the treatment and inspection of the immigrants on the island, were made, in all of which the commissioner was supported by Commissioner General Sargent and through him by the president himself, who has applied the "square deal" rule to the men, women and children who flock to these shores from every corner of the globe.

At first the commissioner had intended to build a terminal on the southern eastern end of Ellis Island, with tracks on trestlework connecting directly with the main systems of all the roads going out of Jersey City. The plan was approved by the government and would have been executed, but for the intervention of the big roads concerned, which placed before Commissioner Watchorn a protest against a general terminal on Ellis Island.

Commissioner Watchorn's idea in having a terminal at his right hand, as it were, was to have in the palms of his two hands the care and responsibility of the immigrant from the moment he passed the inspectors until he landed among his friends. A terminal on the island would have given him this complete grasp and responsibility, but the roads, having a fixed agreement with the government to carry immigrants from New York to their destination offered a reasonable compromise, the erection of separate immigrant terminals by each road carrying immigrants.

"The representatives presented reasonable objections to a general terminal," Commissioner Watchorn told a reporter, "and agreed to erect terminal stations for the exclusive use of the immigrant. That's just what we wanted. If they do this—and they have given me their word that they will—the immigrants will be away from the hands of the land shark and reach their destination with sound bodies and purses."

Under the present system complaints reach the commissioner's office of the long delay of immigrants in reaching their destination. Not infrequently the unsuspecting ones fall into the hands of thieves and confidence men after they leave the island or are forced to stay in lodging houses haunted by the lowest criminals because of the slowness of immigrant trains. Several humane reforms have already been made, but Commissioner Watchorn will not be satisfied until the immigration authorities at New York have full control of the situation from the moment the immigrant is turned over to the transporting road until he reaches his destination.

The immigrant terminals are to be erected at once. One line of the roads have already drawn plans for the structures. They will cost collectively more than $1,000,000. The roads doing the largest business with the government are the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Lackawanna, the New Jersey Central and the Baltimore and Ohio. The Pennsylvania and the systems connected with its main line get the bulk of immigrants, because fully 70 per cent of the immigrants settle in western towns or cities. The Lackawanna carries that portion which, by natural trend, goes to coal mining towns. The Baltimore and Ohio, with its branch systems through the hard coal territory, carries thousands into that region, and for all of the roads interested the carrying of the immigrant is a profitable business.

The Baltimore and Ohio, the Lackawanna and the New Jersey Central will build their terminals on the Jersey side of the bay. The Pennsylvania company has revised the plans for its big terminal on the upper west side of Manhattan to allow a large space for a separate immigrant station connecting directly with tracks over which only the immigrant trains will run out. There are to be several more terminals on and a change of schedule made in all the roads when the new terminals are constructed. Some of the roads hope to have their terminals built and in operation in the fall. Each of the structures is to have every form of convenience for the immigrant.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

E. S. Willard is soon to return to England.

Will Archie and Adele Cox are the midgets who impersonate "the babes" in "Babes in the Wood."

Maxine Elliott is now appearing with the added prestige of a London success won both dramatically and so cially.

Harrison Hunter of Viola Allen's company received news recently that he was the recipient, through his brother's will, of $100,000.

Charles Frohman has made arrangements with Miss Maudie Adams by which she has agreed to play the title role in "Peter Pan" for the next two years.

Viola Allen said to an interviewer lately: "I know I should have done just as Betty Singleton did every moment of the play. That speech before the curtain! I feel every word of it, and I know how she felt it."

Electricity has done marvels in stage presentations of latter years, but it is doubtful if this powerful force has ever been utilized more effectively than it is in "At the World's Mercy," a new and powerful play by Owen Davis.

While in St. Louis recently Dorothy Fierrod, leading lady for Tim Murphy, bought six sample dresses of a Paris firm who had exhibited them at the world's fair. She will wear them in a new production Mr. Murphy has in view.

FACTS FROM FRANCE.

The president of France receives a salary of $120,000 per year. He is, besides, entitled to a private car and all his expenses.

The cabinetmakers of France are artists, but they keep reproducing year after year the style which their forefathers have made for centuries.

Having been married in 1882, at the age of sixteen, the wife of a mechanic at the French arsenal in Rochefort recently gave birth to her twenty-third child.

Paris taximeter cabs are to be fitted with small electric lamps, which will be at the service of the passenger upon slipping a small coin in a slot. The light will glow for about half an hour for each coin.

A Paris flat owner has hit upon an idea which is popular with his tenants. On the door of every apartment is a number, and on the first of each month the landlord draws a lottery, and the occupant of the flat the number of which proves to be the winning one pays no rent.

ENGLISH ETCHINGS.

Londoners use on an average thirty-four gallons of water per head per day. A total of $3,670,000 is annually paid by the British people for the support of the royal family.

Last year's output of new ships in England (steam and sail) was 315, with a tonnage of 1,333,730, as against 403 ships in 1904, with a tonnage of 1,019,800.

Recent political meeting in England the speaker made a jest and, finding that his audience had missed the point of it, said playfully, "I had hoped, gentlemen, that you would laugh at that." A plaintive voice came through the silence, "I laughed, mister." Then everybody did.

Of books published in England last year—there were 8,252 of them—1,730 were novels. The works connected with education numbered 694, and of theological books there were 503. There were 540 historical and biographical works. Poetry and the drama figured not so largely.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

The empire gown will be more popular than it was when introduced last autumn.

Lace flounces are in the highest esteem for trimming gowns to be worn after dark.
