SAYS MCKINLEY IS A BAD MAN

A press dispatch from Salem says: State Land Agent West is in receipt of a letter from James L. Rodgers, American consul-general at Shanghai, China, dated March 12, saying:
"Hornace G. McKinley has been in Shanghai for some time past, but at present is at Ningpo. I have no knowledge of the whereabouts of S. A. D. Pater."
West has another letter from John Fowler, consul-general at Chongking, dated March 10, saying McKinley, under the name of "William Wilson, Minneapolis, Minn.," called on him March 11, and probably left the same day for Tientsin on the way to Harbin. He tells of the "sings of McKinley at Little Egypt in Shanghai and says he has information that McKinley is a bad man."

NEW LODGE AT SPRINGFIELD

Lincoln Annuity Union Organized With Twenty-Two Charter Members

The Lincoln Annuity Union was organized in Springfield last week by Mrs. Ada B. Jewett with a charter membership of 22. Mrs. Jewett is the supreme organizer and thoroughly understands the art of organizing a lodge of men and women who are of good moral character and who are socially acceptable to each other. This lodge starts out under the most favorable circumstances and promises to be one of the leading social and fraternal orders in Springfield.
The Lincoln Annuity Union is purely fraternal, patriotic and benevolent and promotes peace, good will and affection among and for its members. It provides mutual aid and assistance to both men and women and has a plan of insurance that would pay the most skeptical to investigate.
The officers who were elected for the year were: Mrs. AnValzah, speaker; Mrs. J. P. Fry, vice speaker; Charles Dority, past speaker; Mrs. W. Casteel, chaplain; W. Luther, clerk; M. W. Casteel, sergeant-at-arms; Mrs. Beaudot, inner door keeper; W. Casteel, outer door keeper; Dr. VanValzah, physician.—News.

Note and Comment

Of all deeds that attempt of a San Francisco mob to reach the millions in the great riot vaults appears about the most desperate, especially as they were guarded by soldiers. There are over three hundred millions stored therein, but even with the best tools and explosives and plenty of time it would take experts to crack them sufficiently to get the money.
Three hundred thousand to feed and care for is a task, but the American people may be trusted to see that the least possible suffering will result.
Births will not wait, and not a few have first seen the light during and since the fire in tents or under sheets or blankets stretched over low ridge-poles in the public parks and vacant lots of San Francisco. There are not less than 300,000 homeless, homeless people there, so the number of outdoor births must be considerable.
The wind was and is tempered to the shorn lamb in this instance—just think of the suffering and death that would have ensued had the fire come with storm and rain.

ARRIVES FROM SCENE OF EARTHQUAKE

Z. A. Davis Tells of His Experiences in San Francisco

Felt as if the Earth Was Sinking-- Suffering of the People in the City Is Indescribable-- Eugene Boys Safe

Z. A. Davis, who resides at East Street and Mill streets, in this city, arrived in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, arriving home last night on one of the delayed trains. A reporter called at his residence this morning and interviewed him. He talked very interestingly for an hour or more of his experience in the city during the excitement of the earthquake and fire. A very full account of his story as told to the reporter would be the most interesting account of the disaster yet printed, but in space allows the publication of only a few of the salient features of the account.
Mr. Davis was staying at the Auditorium Hotel, a six-story brick structure at 117 Broadway street, one block north of Market, at the time of the earthquake. He was in room 112 on the top floor. He was awake a short time before the shock came and went to sleep again, but had been asleep only a few minutes when he was awakened by being thrown out of his bed to the floor. Mr. Davis says his recollection at that time were beyond human power to describe. With difficulty he rose to his feet and tried to make his way to the door, but because of the swaying and pitching of the building it was impossible to walk. The best way he could describe his sensations was to say that it seemed as if the earth was sinking and that the ocean would sweep over everything.

The Grand theatre adjoined the hotel where Mr. Davis stayed. He looked out of the window of his room and it appeared as if the dome of the theatre building was moving right up to him. From the first Mr. Davis realized that it was an earthquake and he thought his time had come. He finally made his way to the door of the room, but was unable to open it. The building soon lurched in another direction and the door flew open. In the hallway men were cursing, women and children were screaming and pandemonium reigned. All were in their night clothes and were making their way down the stairs to get out of the building, the elevators having been out of commission. The clerk of the hotel, with the presence of mind, locked the outside doors, thus preventing the guests from going into the streets, where brick and stone and all kinds of debris were flying, killing men and women to the score. Seeing that he could not get out of the building, Mr. Davis returned to his room and dressed himself, but because of the recurrence of the shocks he was compelled to hurry away and leave most of his belongings there. The front of the hotel where he stayed fell into the street a few minutes after the first shock.

SUFFERING INDESCRIBABLE.

Mr. Davis says the suffering of the people was indescribable. No water nor food could be had at any price for a long time. He had nothing to eat or drink the first day and had nothing but a cup of black coffee and two crackers the next day. Paying a dollar for them. He remained in the city 26 hours after the earthquake, being unable for a long time to find a way through the fire and demolished buildings to the ferris to cross the bay over to Oakland.

EUGENE BOYS ALL RIGHT.

Mr. Davis says that Cass Matlock and Ed Goodrich, formerly of Eugene, roomed at the Oregon House, a wooden building on Turk street, in the same block with the Auditorium Hotel. He did not see the boys after the earthquake, but as no lives were lost in the building, he is sure they are undoubtedly safe. He knows nothing as to the safety of other former Eugene residents there.
Of course Mr. Davis is very glad to get home and says he never wants to go to San Francisco again. He thinks people by the thousand will leave the city never to return and that it will be years and years before the city will be what it was before.

BEGIN TO HEAR FROM RELATIVES

Anxiety of Eugene People Beginning to Be Relieved--Telegrams Received

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kays last night received a message from their daughter, Miss Leone Kays, who was attending art school in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake. She was at Fruitvale, an Oakland suburb, when the message was sent. She said she had succeeded in saving all her effects and that she was not injured in any manner. Mrs. Hill, sister of Mrs. W. L. Cheshire, also escaped safely.

E. Schwarzschild this morning received a telegram from Maurice S. Hellman, a cousin stating that all his relatives in the city were safe.

Frank Ware this morning received the following from Joel B. Ware, his brother, at San Francisco: "I am safe and sound."

Mrs. Church this morning received a telegram from her son Earl, stating that he was all right and that he might be home soon.

S. C. Van Armatage, formerly of Eugene but now of Portland, who was at Oakland at the time of the earthquake, went there last night to visit relatives. He went over to San Francisco the morning of the earthquake.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Barrett, of Albany, the latter formerly Ruth Flinn, passed through here this afternoon on their way home from San Francisco. They had to move their lodgings three times after the earthquake on account of the fire, and walked all Wednesday night before they could get out of the city. They were married at the Palace Hotel only a day or two before the earthquake.

Mrs. W. W. Martin today received a letter from her sister, Mrs. B. S. Taylor, Santa Rosa. She said their residence stood but their grocery store was demolished. They are using the churches there as morgues.

Attorney Geo. B. Morris today received the following telegram from Herbert C. Thompson, formerly of Eugene: "Family escaped, but burned out. Saw Thurston and Church safe at Ross Valley."
