Work of Irrigation

Irrigation is becoming the greatest factor in the work of homebuilding in America, and its importance is becoming more fully recognized every day. The New York Sun said in a recent editorial that the men who are pushing irrigation into the arid regions of the great West are benefiting more of the populace of this country directly and indirectly than any other body of men who are interested in public work.
More irrigation means more productive homes for individual farmers and homes that, once occupied, will not be deserted, as crops and prosperity are insured to the farmer who has the water supply under his control.
Irrigation means more traffic for the railroads, more and better food for the people who live where food is scarce and high. It develops those regions of the country that most need developing; it relieves congestion in the older agricultural regions by affording new and attractive fields for the progressive young men. It is a work that should be more appreciated and encouraged.

Mrs. Anna Lorenz, of Cincinnati, is suing for a divorce, and if she states facts should have it. She charges that her husband was in the habit of appearing before her guests, blushing young high school girls and others, in his bare feet and would sit down in the presence of the company and deliberately wriggle his toes in order to humiliate her friends. "There was no question of his not knowing better," she said, "because he never acted so when we were alone. He would return from the city on Sunday afternoons and exchange his good clothes for his working clothes, and then after removing his shoes would come into the parlor where my girl friends were, and proceed to wriggle his toes."

Advertising is a pretty safe index of the volume of business done by a store or company. Taking it for a number of years it is as reliable a test as can be asked or given. "It is easier," said a merchant not long ago, "to pay a bill of $100 when there is a balance of $200 in the bank than it is to pay $50 with only $75 in the bank. That is about the proportion liberal advertising has effected for me." A daily and weekly advertisement in the Guard goes to 3100 subscribers and they always figure five readers to a subscriber, which means 15,500 readers. That means, at the advertising rates charged here, the cheapest publicity in the world.

They generally hit the baseball umpire with a bat, but at Dover, Delaware, the other day they shot him through a shoulder and a bystander through the heart. Two negroes did the shooting. Farther south—well, farther south matters would have been promptly attended to at once, so those negroes could do no more shooting. But they have negroes to spare down south.

Thirteen thousand gallons of whiskey went into Benson creek, Kentucky, the other day through an accident to a distillery located on its bank. Thousands of fish rendered temporarily helpless by the mixture were caught. The fish came to the surface in droves, sported about and cut fantastic capers.

Columbia county, on the river below Portland, was one of the counties to go dry, leading the St. Helen's Mist to remark: "We must have a mill of some kind, and since the gin mills are compelled to close their doors next month we trust some one will be good enough to build a saw-mill."

The doctors took out a man's heart the other day, sewed up a wound in it, but it back in place again and the patient still lives. That's a pretty big newspaper story—until you consider that the subject was a Philadelphia man and that there was plenty of time between heart beats for the doctors to operate without disturbing his regular pulse action.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon really believes that he may be president yet, thereby furnishing a pointed illustration of the saying that "there is no fool like an old fool."

J. Edward Addicks, like hope, punge eternally for that coveted senatorial toga, only to see a rival snatch it. Now he says it's dead and y next time.

Colonel Henry A. Dupont, the powder magnate, has got into the rent at last. It is to be hoped that he will create no explosions in that sedate body.

Pull for the electric road. It will double the value of every piece of real estate in Eugene and increase the price of every pound of farm produce.

The Panama canal bids fair to cost as much as a genuine Panama hat at the rate they are spending money on it.

Alice Longworth fails to receive half the space in the newspapers that Alice Roosevelt used to.

Delaware has got rid of Addicks. But Oregon still has Bourne on her hands.

Mow the grass along the streets and on the vacant lots.

Twelve Murderers Die Together. Two natives sentenced to death for the murder of Subinspector Hunt and Trooper George Armstrong of the Natal police were executed at Richmond and met their death with wonderful stoicism. They were taken out in two groups to a place where graves had been dug. Here a minister prayed with them and their eyes were bandaged. When the word of command was uttered thirty-six rifle shots were fired at the same time. The bodies of the executed men were literally riddled.

Red Shirt Saves a Train. An Italian employed by the Big Four railroad saved a fast train bound for Indianapolis recently. A heavy rainfall caused a creek to rise rapidly and wash away a part of the trestle near the city of Marion, Ind. The Italian, knowing that the passenger train was due, took off his red flannel shirt and used it as a danger signal to flag the train, which was stopped in time to save a disastrous wreck.

The Girls' Den. To girls who work or who are trying to improve themselves in any way a den is a necessity. This is a place where work may be left about without fear of its being spirited away by a tidy maid, where every sort of industry may be carried on wholeheartedly and without fear of interruption. The mother of the family should consider the den as the property of her daughters and only visit it at their urgent invitation. It is well for the different members of a family to keep some place to themselves, for the mother's boudoir to be a sacred place to which the husband and children feel it an honor to be admitted, for the daughter's room to be a sweet, homely place where the whole family, if the girl wishes it, may assemble when the day's work is done.

The Welcome Shock. The breezes they at times get dry. Quite too familiar, one would say. A bit of hose. It's very shocking, goodness knows.

It's not a kind thing in the wind, but if you notice you will find that those who knock will walk a block. Or even two to get the shock.

His scheme. The ice man has, to work his plot, a very neat device. The price he charges makes us hot, and then we need more ice.

Can Be Mended. "He is a marriage broker." "A broker? What does he break?" "Oh, nothing but hearts."

Why Some College Men Fail In the Battle of Life

By C. F. THWING, President Western Reserve University, Cleveland
In earlier days members of college faculties were not great scholars, but GREAT PERSONALITIES. The regard paid to scholarship has increased, but not regard to personality. More attention is paid to conveying of truth than to formation of manhood. Truth should ever be a PRIMARY aim, but colleges must train men of energy, of high moral standards and good fellowship.
COLLEGE GRADUATES FAIL, WHEN THEY DO FAIL, FOR ONE OR ALL OF THREE REASONS—INDOLENCE, WICKEDNESS OR INABILITY TO GET ALONG WITH THEIR FELLOWS.

A Poem for Today

LEATHER STOCKING

By John Gardner Calkins Brainard

JOHN G. C. BRAINARD was born in New London, Conn., Oct. 23, 1796. He was graduated from Yale college in 1815. He studied law, but abandoned that profession for newspaper work. He was for five years editor of the Connecticut Mirror at Hartford. He died Sept. 26, 1828. Several editions of his poems have been published. One, issued in 1821, is accompanied by a memoir of the poet by John G. Whittier. His poem of "Leather Stocking" given below, is based on an incident in Cooper's novel of "The Pioneers," when Leather Stocking quits the settlement of the white men and with his dogs and gun starts for the unexplored forests of the distant west.
FAR away from the hillside, the lake and the hamlet,
The rock and the brook and the yew meadow so gay;
From the footpath that winds by the side of the streamlet;
From his hut and the grave of his friend, far away—
He is gone where the footsteps of men never ventured,
Where the glooms of the wild tangled forest are centered,
Where no beam of the sun or the sweet moon has entered,
No bloodhound has roused up the deer with his bay.
Light be the heart of the poor lonely wanderer;
Firm be his step through each wearisome mile—
Far from the cruel man, far from the plunderer,
Far from the track of the mean and the vile,
And when death, with the last of its terrors, assails him,
And all but the last throbs of memory fails him,
He'll think of the friend, far away, that bewails him,
And light up the cold touch of death with a smile.
And there shall the dew shed its sweetness and luster;
There for his pall shall the oak leaves be spread—
The sweetbriar shall bloom and the wild grape shall cluster;
And o'er him the leaves of the ivy be shed,
There shall they mix with the fern and the heather,
There shall the young eagle shed its first feather;
The wolves, with his wild dogs, shall lie there together,
And moan o'er the spot where the hunter is laid.

Damp Salt. One of the petty annoyances of the table is damp salt, and housekeepers who are solicitous and particular about everything else seem to be singularly obtuse in this matter. Aside from the dampness of the salt, little attention is paid to the quality. It seems to be taken for granted that salt is salt, without any degrees of excellence. Nothing should be used but prepared table salt, which can always be got, and little trouble is now experienced in getting salt so prepared that it will take out freely.
In any case, the difficulty can always be overcome by heating the saltcellars before each meal, or by mixing cornstarch with the salt in the proportion of one part of cornstarch to ten of salt. This proportion should be carefully preserved, as too much cornstarch detracts from the seasoning properties of the salt.
The heating of the salt vessels is the preferred method. The same observations to some extent apply to pepper. Keep the boxes dry by heating before use.

Linoleum. A household economies authority says: "In caring for linoleum do not use soapsuds as for scrubbing a floor. It stands to reason that soap is going to injure the varnish and the finish. On a farm where there is plenty of milk a cloth wrung out of skim milk is the best means of taking up the dust and brightening the linoleum. Where milk is scarce or needed for food use lukewarm water to which has been added half a cupful of kerosene oil or some good furniture polish. Wring the cloth rather dry from this and go over the linoleum after sweeping, and it will be quite new and bright and the finish uninjured. Most housewives scrub linoleum and linoleum as though it were a bare floor. It is dusty rather than dirty, since everything remains on the top and for this reason a clean cloth slightly damp is all that is necessary."

Following the Flag When our soldiers went to Cuba and the Philippines health was the most important consideration. William T. Morgan, retired Commissary Sergeant U. S. A., of Rural Route 1, Cotacora, N. H., says: "I was two years in Cuba and two years in the Philippines, and being subject to colic, I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Constipation, which kept me in perfect health. And now, in New Hampshire, we find it the best medicine in the world for coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and all lung diseases. Guaranteed at W. L. DeLano, druggist. ## Slightly Building Locations

If you want a home building place where you have plenty of room—are not crowded by neighbors yet within ten minutes walk of the business part of town, see J. R. Campbell about those two slightly lots where you first will strike the raise of College hill, turning west by Chapman's planing mill, then south to get there. Good sidewalk to property and streets on both sides of lots graded and gravelled. The grading on both sides leaves the lots one to two feet above the grade with a gentle slope on the both streets. Splendid view of valley, mountains and town from the location.
An ordinary gait in walking will take you there from the business part of town in ten minutes. At end of lengthwise board walk on left.
