Notice To Public

The Guard wishes it understood that the only advertising matter that it prints free are the ordinary notices of church services. All notices of lodges, societies, church entertainments, where admission is charged, and all similar advertising matter will be charged for at a reasonable rate per line. We want this understood so that there may be no misunderstanding in the future.

A newspaper's only sources of revenue are its advertising space and subscription lists, and the public has no more right to expect these free than to ask the merchant to give away his goods. The cutting off of the free list will allow more equitable and reasonable rates to all, and the Guard proposes to reduce both the advertising and subscription free list to the minimum.

Fire Protection Needed

The fire of last night emphasized the need of better fire protection in Eugene. No hose cart or ladder truck reached the scene or nearer than a block and a half from it, and then too late to be of any service. There is not a residence in that section of the city but is virtually without fire protection.

It is dillying with a grave danger for the city council to longer delay the work in improving our facilities for the protection of property from fire. There should be at least two paid men on duty at the central fire station, as well as horses in readiness for hauling the apparatus. This would cost some money, it is true, but is in line with Eugene's growth, and the security of property, which is the chief aim of city government, demands it.

Empire State Politics

New York politics is very badly mixed this year on both sides. The Republicans are split into two warring factions, Governor Higgins and the Roosevelt influence being opposed by Senator Platt and former Governor Odell, who seem to have the best of the squabble now, through their stroke of policy in making Chas. E. Hughes, the insurance inquisitor, their gubernatorial candidate.

On the Democratic side, the situation is most complex and interesting. Last year William Travers Jerome opposed both Republican and Democratic candidates for district attorney and won. Now Democrats who cry: "Anything to beat Hearst" are willing to make Jerome the party candidate. They may accept him on his own terms, which are thus defined: "In the present shameful condition of our political life in this city I am willing to run for the office of governor of the state, if the Democratic convention shall nominate me without any understanding, expressed or implied, other than that if elected, I shall obey my oath of office as I understand it, in letter and in spirit." This means that Jerome will run as a Democratic candidate without being considered a Democrat.

The party machine may accept him in order to have a plausible pretext for opposing Hearst. But Hearst has a strong labor following which may divide the Democratic vote considerably. Hearst's followers may even be strong enough to prevent the nomination of Jerome and secure that of their leader. Moreover, there are many sturdy Democrats in New York who do not like a candidate who implies that he is above the party which proposes to nominate him. They would rather vote for a Republican than an avowed candidate of that kind. Moreover, Democrats who voted for Jerome as district attorney may not vote for him for governor, deeming him unfit for such executive duties. He has lost popularity since he was elected as district attorney, it being assumed that he has been too lenient with the insurance fiscals.

In case Hearst runs as an independent candidate and Jerome as a Democrat, the Republican candidate will have bright prospects despite the party strife, provided that he shall be the right kind of candidate. He will find thousands of supporters outside New York upon whom the avowed Jerome, exorcises no spell.

Some persons are quite certain that many monkeys are able to talk and that they indulge the gift altogether too freely. Dr. W. Reed Blair, a New York physician, however, is of the opinion that the monkey who delights the small boy at the circus could talk if he only had a nose. His theory is that the creature is prevented from talking because there is no nasal passage sufficient to sustain and throw off the sound vibrations. With that idea in mind he is at work building an artificial nose on the head of a monkey. He has been experimenting for some time and claims his subjects show marked progress toward linguistic accomplishments. Now he is grafting a nose on one of them. If science can accomplish anything like that it will take a lot of conceit out of ordinary mortals.

King Edward made $10,000,000 in Union Pacific stock by the late boom in Harriman securities, so the papers say. If Ed only had sense enough to throw his crown away he might come to America, and in time be rated as an uncrowned king of finance, with money to burn, a string of race horses, assortment of automobiles, a whole company of chorus girls, and more influence in the National congress than he has now in the English parliament. Edward, the sport and speculator, might in due course of time aspire even to become another Charlie Schwab.

Probably Judge Bennett is pleased to turn the work of defending the alleged land frauders over to W. D. Fenton and his array of brilliant legal associates. Bennett is one of the brightest lawyers in the state, but he seems to have gone up against a sure thing game.
