Municipal Insurance

The reputation of losses at San Francisco by the fire insurance companies and the recent sharp advance in rates by these concerns, has caused a great deal of discussion of the insurance problem. Perhaps the best solution yet offered is that of "Municipal Insurance," which was recently discussed by the San Francisco Star as follows:

The plan of Mayor John P. Studley, of New Haven, Conn., to have the municipality attend to the fire insurance business is well worthy of consideration. The Studley plan was first broached at a meeting of the mayors of the state of Connecticut, and many of these gentlemen expressed themselves as favoring careful investigation of the proposition. In the city of New Haven it is estimated that the premiums paid annually for fire insurance amount to $500,000, while the losses are only about $125,000, the difference, $375,000, being profit to the insurance company.

The great catastrophe in this city has furnished Mayor Studley with material from which he can certainly strengthen his arguments. For instance, if the fire insurance companies can recoup their losses by raising the rates for policy holders, it is certain that there is money in the business; and if the city can run the business at a minimum cost, so as to give insurance at a reasonable figure, it is time for the people to get in and save themselves money.

One risk would certainly be done away with—the reputation of insurance and the withdrawal from the city and state of the sneak thief company. In case of catastrophe the city cannot get away, and its obligations would always be made good.

Edward Rosewater, candidate for the republican senatorial nomination in Nebraska, who did not land the plum, however, evidently does not hold the Dingley tariff sacred. His paper, the Omaha Bee, recognizes "that the tariff schedules are excessive in many respects, and that the postponement of revision is merely a temporary makeshift," and declares that "the party will have to be ready to meet it (the demand for revision) with a fairly definite program that will satisfy the people." Now note how the "standpatters" will veer about when they see paragraphs like the above and read Roosevelt's message.

it. "Why get together any more money, Mr. Sage? You can't eat it; you can't drink it. What good will it do you? "Ever play marbles?" Uncle Russell asked. "Yes, when I was a boy." "Couldn't eat 'em, could you? Couldn't drink 'em, could you? No use to you, were they? What did you play marbles for?" But it might be added that when boys had pocketfuls of marbles they were always ready to divide them with their playmates.

Even the Eugene banks will close circus day in order that the financiers may go and see the elephants. All the money in town tomorrow will be deposited on the circus grounds anyway.

Wm. J. Bryan is at sea. His friends in Illinois are somewhat in the same condition.

Better fire protection will help materially to build up a Greater Eugene.

FOREPAUGH & SELLS' CIRCUS TOMORROW

It is said that every laugh makes a man a day younger. If the statement is true—and no good argument has yet been presented to prove that it is not—it will be an easy matter for any individual to live a year longer, and at the very nominal expense of 50 cents for the entire 365 days. It may be said that there are no two human beings on earth's surface who will equally enjoy a given funny action or a witty speech. One man will not see the point in a story that to the other appears the most laughable thing imaginable. An incident that in action almost convulses the onlooker with laughter will not appear at all funny to the third party to whom the incident is recited. But let 10,000 people witness, at the same time, 1,000 funny actions and queer antics and it will be impossible to find one individual in the entire aggregation of spectators whose ribs have not been tickled with laughter, and whose sense of humor has not been appealed to.

The Adam Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' circus carry on their list of entertainers a troupe of laughter-making stags—a collection of artists whose whole existence is devoted to the task of provoking laughter. Forty merry clowns. There are people in this world who do not want to laugh. Let them warned that they are courting disappointment in this direction if they visit the Forepaugh-Sells shows Friday next. Why not laugh and live the extra year? The expense is nominal, the entertainment is exciting, and the time devoted to the enjoyment is well spent. You awaken the next day with renewed vigor, and take up the thread of life with a lighter heart.

TO RAILROADS AND OTHER TRANSPORTATION COMPANIES AND PROPRIETORS OF SLAUGHTERING, MEAT CANNING, SALTING, PACKING, RENDERING OR SIMILAR ESTABLISHMENTS.

Your attention is invited to the fact that under the terms of the Meat Inspection Act, approved June 30, 1906, no person, firm or corporation shall, on and after October 1, 1906, transport or offer for transportation, and no carrier of interstate or foreign commerce shall transport, or reserve for transportation from one state or territory, or the District of Columbia, to another state or territory or the District of Columbia, or to any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, or to any foreign country, any carcass, or parts thereof, of meat or meat food products thereof, which have not been inspected, examined and marked "Inspected and passed" in accordance with the terms of the law, and with the rules and regulations prescribed by the secretary of agriculture. An exemption may be made by the secretary of agriculture of retail butchers and retail dealers in meat and meat food products, supplying their customers through the medium of interstate or foreign commerce. The above provision of law necessitates either the establishment of inspection or a notice of exemption by the department of agriculture on or before October 1, 1906, for all persons who expect to offer meat or meat food products for transportation in interstate or foreign commerce on or after that date. To enable the department to determine upon the necessary number of inspectors, and to either establish inspection or to grant exemption, all persons, firms and corporations who do not now have inspection and who deal in meat or meat food products, which are transported either in interstate or foreign commerce, are requested to send immediately to the secretary of agriculture a full and complete statement of the amount of meat or meat food products handled in interstate or foreign commerce by the particular establishment, the location and character of the operations of the establishment, the names of the proprietors of the establishment, and such other information as may be necessary to enable the secretary of agriculture to determine whether inspection or exemption should be granted.—JAMES WILSON, Secretary.

Three Facts for You to Consider

A shoemaker by trade can select good shoes, where others rely on statements made by the seller.

A shoe house paying heavy rent and other heavy expenses puts the additional price on the stock you buy.

If you will study the facts above you can plainly see why it is a fact we save you money and give you goods that wear.
