

BOULEVARD TO HENDRICKS' PARK SITE

Mayor Wilkins, Councilmen Henderson, Beckwith, Garrett, McCrady and City Surveyor Wagner, accompanied by M. Svarverud, this morning drove out to the site of Hendricks' Park on Fairmount Heights and viewed out a boulevard from a point near M. Svarverud's residence to the park, a distance of about three-fourths of a mile. The new boulevard is merely an extension of the boulevard that rounds the hill on which is situated the Svarverud residence. The extension will wind in and out among the hills and can be made into a very picturesque road.

Susie Fennell Pipes, Violinist, in Concert with M. S. Walker Reed, Eugene Theatre Saturday Evening, Dec. 15.

Press Comments on Mrs. Pipes' Playing.

Portland Oregonian: "A talented violinist, showing delicacy of tone production, skill of technique and much temperamental fire. The audience was carried by storm. She was applauded vigorously and had to return for flowers, the audience refusing to be quiet until an encore was given."

Evening Telegram: "A remarkably brilliant violinist well-known in Portland and throughout the state."

Portland Journal: "Mrs. Pipes returned only a few weeks ago from Berlin. Her year abroad was very successful. She was engaged by Godowsky as instructor for his son and was mentioned in the New York Musical Courier as a highly creditable performer who had made astonishing progress since coming to Berlin. Mr. Spiering, at his private musicales in Berlin, has frequently presented Mrs. Pipes and Nicoline Zedler as the best representatives of his work as an instructor."

Torre Haute News: "Her rendition of Wienawsky's Romance was especially pleasing and brilliant. Her tone was deliciously fine—a rich, golden mellow, almost singing tone. Spiering says that he has never known a finer musical temperament in a woman."

Pygmalion and Galatea.

(By E. P. S.)

It is one thing to turn a thing of life to clay, awful as that is, and another to turn a marble statue to life, impossible though it be. Many a sculptor has desired the power of creating flesh and blood, but last night the senior class of the university, in their play, "Pygmalion and Galatea," demonstrated that the consequences of such a power are more awful than the one of death man to man.

Though the play was called a comedy on the program, to me it was a very sad one. In the plot was blended much of the ridiculous, much of the impossible, and a great many just sarcasms on the conceit of humanity, yet that one person should suffer the fate that Galatea did, and one so innocent and beautiful, as was Miss Goddard in that role last night, is certainly not trivial or light. The story is simple; ask your neighbor and he will tell it to you, for he was undoubtedly there, as the opera house was filled with Eugene people and students. From a dramatic point of view the play is as strong a one as has been seen on the boards in Eugene for at least two years, and that its power was well felt speaks much for the acting of the students. Really, however, the parts were too heavy for the characters that supported them last night, but the seniors came so near the ideal in their work that they made the entertainment of the evening far better than any traveling company of mountebanks have theirs this fall.

Though Miss Goddard, as Galatea, and Miss Williams, as Pygmalion's wife, supported their parts really wonderfully well, I am glad to say that neither has the magnetism of the emotional actress. That they did so well speaks better for them, as seniors of the university, than would the other much desired praise. It is only through the greatest concentration that the amateur can attain the power that they did last night, and for that work which was shown throughout the whole cast they, the members of the company of students, deserve much greater praise than did ever any professional talent which has appeared here.

Francis Galloway, as Pygmalion, showed himself to be perfectly capable of his part, and of supporting one even more severe. His place was very important, but more of a negative nature, for he did not have the steady strain of the more delicate situations to support as did Miss Goddard.

The minor characters were all particularly good. "Buck" Kelly, as Chryso, an art patron, created more laughter among the grown-ups than a circus clown would among the children. "Jack" Latourette as Leulippe, a soldier, acted his part perfectly, as did also "Joe" Barber and Paul Bond as Mimos and Agosimos respectively, in the roles of slaves. Miss wife impersonated ideally the tongue-wielder that we sometimes meet. Miss Rothrock also filled the part of Pygmalion's sister, more than acceptably.

LEWIS' THEATRE RESTAURANT CHANGES HANDS

Henry L. Gibbs and Wife, former Managers of The Palms, Today Took Charge.

Henry L. Gibbs and wife today assumed the management of the Lewis restaurant, formerly "The Palms," in the theatre block. A. W. Lewis, whom they succeed, opened the place a couple of months ago. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs formerly conducted "The Palms," giving entire satisfaction to the general public. Their reputation as caterers to the public is well established, and we predict that under their management the business of the place will grow by bounds and leaps. They will have the best of service and everything in the eating line that the market affords.

Vacant Timber Land.

About 4,000 acres in Lane county;

pling and tie timber, from 18 to 24 inches in diameter; stands very thick and is located on good stream. Last chance to secure a timber claim. For particulars address or call on C. C. Oglesby, 640 Oak street, Eugene Oregon.

Nice rooms and beds for 25 cents at Courthouse Lodging House, just north of the courthouse. Quiet place and close to the business part of town. See transparency "Beds" from Beckwith corner.

J. S. Luckey, the jeweler, has been in business in Eugene for over 40 years and has never carried so large and fine a stock of goods as he does now. All goods are priced in plain figures and the price is as attractive as the goods.

Company C will give an informal dance after inspection on Thursday night, December 20.

DIED.

At his home near Vida on Tuesday, December 11, 1906, or paralysis, James Tucker, aged 75 years. He was a single man, an old resident of that community.
