PORTLAND MARKET REVIEW.

Portland, Or., Jan. 3.—As the prune crop in Oregon and Washington turned out only about one-half of the early estimates, it is said that heavy penalties have had to be paid by some packers of Italians for failure to fulfill contracts made last summer. Some of the payments of such penalties, it is understood, have run up as high as $800 a car.

In the meantime the Eastern markets continue decidedly strong on the large sizes of prunes, of which but few are available, but the intermediate sizes are more or less neglected, as are other varieties of dried fruits during the holiday season. Discussing the export inquiry for prunes, a large Eastern handler is quoted as follows:

The English demand has been especially active, as usually the English market handles a large portion of the French crop, and the fact that the French dealers had to cut their orders heavily turned the English onto the American article. The demand was something that no American packer could figure on. Germany has also been an exceptionally heavy buyer of the American product—in fact, from all Europe there has been a large and increased demand.

Eggs and Butter.
The demand for eggs is not brisk. There is little outside inquiry, but barely enough to steady prices. The heavy shipping demand will come later in the month. Receipts hold good.

The butter market is steady, with no new features.

Wanted Sales in Hop Region.
A few scattering sales of hops from the country, but they were mostly in very small lots. Several lots taken on lot were rejected. There continues to be an Eastern inquiry, a number of orders being received yesterday. No very active market, however, is expected immediately after the holidays. Some dealers believe that buying will not get in its volume before February, and others are of the opinion that there will be nothing but a dragging market during the remainder of the season. The hop market, however, usually goes contrary to expectations so the wise ones are backward about making forecasts.

Steady Movement in Green Produce.
A car of celery arrived yesterday, and nearly all of it cleaned up before the day was over. What small lots of sweet potatoes were left on Front street were in few hands and firmly held. Hothouse lettuce was scarce, and other varieties of vegetables in fair supply. Two cars of oranges arrived. Bananas were well cleaned up. Three cars are due today.
