HARDWARE COMPANY INCORPORATES

The Berger-Bean Hardware Company, of Eugene, has filed articles of incorporation with the county clerk. The principal incorporators are F. J. Berger and F. C. Bean, and the capital stock is $25,000. Mr. Bean is the former Mapleton merchant who recently sold out to Joe Morris, of Florence, and Mr. Berger is the well-known hardware merchant of this city. Both are thorough business men and will no doubt continue to enjoy the success that has attended Mr. Berger's efforts since going into business here. There are one or two other stockholders in the corporation, but their names are not given out for publication.

The new firm will enlarge the business in several branches and will continue at the old stand for the present, although the quarters are crowded. They may at some future time remove to a larger room.

An inventory of the stock is now being made, and when it is completed the new firm will take possession of the store.

LONG FELT WANT IN EUGENE.

While working in the largest dyeing and cleaning works on the coast and while there seeing lots of garments shipped from Eugene to be dry-cleaned, or dyed, and after investigating and going over the ground thoroughly we saw at once that there was a good opening for a first-class cleaning and dyeing works in Eugene. So we have decided to put in a first-class plant and are doing well from the start. We are the only experts in this line north of San Francisco, and have had over 12 years' experience and guarantee all work. All articles dyed and cleaned by us are treated separately for sanitary purposes and done by hand. In this way we obtain good results and as no machinery is used in our work that will tear or injure the fabric.

Everything possible in cleaning or dyeing. Eugene Dye Works, 659 Willamette street. Phone Red 2861. C. Mack, Jr., manager.

Needham of California—Favrot, Who Killed a Man—Ambassador Riddle's Diplomacy—Governor Mead and the Japs—Miss Julia Richman—Senator Penrose and a Michigan Hunter.

THOUGH a Republican, Representative James Carson Needham of Modesto, Cal., has been very emphatic in his disapproval of the president's Japanese policy. He is a congressman from the fifth California district and is serving his fourth term. He thinks the treatment of the Japanese problem in the present presidential campaign calculated to fan the flames of race antagonism on the Pacific coast.

Congressman Needham is forty-two years old and in the matter of birth has the advantage of another statesman who were born in log cabins. He can go them one better, for he was born in an emigrant wagon at Carson, Nev., while his parents were on the way to the Golden State. When Needham first ran for congress he was opposed by a California organization called Native Sons of the Golden West. In arguing against the opposition of the society the candidate said: "I admit I wasn't born in California, but it wasn't my fault. I wanted to be born in California and would have been if one of the mules drawing my father's emigrant wagon hadn't taken sick at Carson City and held the family up in that place for a week or two."

The election of Samuel P. Rotan as district attorney in Philadelphia was one of the surprises of the contest in November. He was the candidate of the regular Republicans and was opposed by D. Clarence Gibbons, the candidate of the City party, which included many of the most prominent reformers. Although Mayor Weaver was for a time a supporter of this party, he changed his position just before election and branded the movement as hypocritical, saying it was backed by a newspaper combine having for its object the substitution of a new machine for the one which had been discredited. The election of Rotan was held by Mayor Weaver's friends to be a vindication of the course taken by the city's executive. Mr. Rotan has not held office heretofore. He has led a very active career as a member of the Philadelphia bar.

George K. Favrot, who has been elected to the Sixtieth congress from a Louisiana district, won notoriety a short time ago by shooting and killing Dr. H. H. Aldrich on the street in Baton Rouge. The tragedy occurred in consequence of remarks Aldrich was charged with having made about the wife of the congressman elect. Favrot's only justification of his act was his allegation that the physician had slandered Mrs. Favrot, and his defense on his trial will be based on the "unwritten law." His counsel will be Judge Thomas J. Kornum, who at the last annual meeting of the American Bar association argued in favor of recognition of this principle. There is much interest in legal circles over the outcome of the forthcoming trial.

John W. Riddle, who is to succeed George von L. Meyer as ambassador to Russia, has special qualifications for this place. Mr. Meyer, who is about to enter Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet as postmaster general, was preceded at St. Petersburg by Robert S. McCormick, afterward made ambassador to France. At the time of the presentation of the Russian foreign office of the Jews in the United States regarding the Kishineff outrage Mr. McCormick was absent from St. Petersburg and Riddle, then secretary of the American embassy, was acting charge d'affaires. It fell to him to get the petition before the Russian government. It was an official matter, a delicate task, which he discharged successfully. This petition was first presented to the president of the United States with the request that he transmit it to the czar's government. The state department inquiries made at St. Petersburg to ascertain how the petition could be received and learned that the minister of foreign affairs could not take cognizance of such a document. Thereupon Mr. Riddle asked for an appointment to present a message from the president of the United States. This was granted, and at the interview Mr. Riddle began to read the petition and got halfway through before the minister of foreign affairs, Count Lamsdorff, comprehended what was going on. It was then too late to stop him, and the whole thing was read. On the count notifying him that he would not receive the petition Mr. Riddle so informed his own government. Appreciation of his services was shortly afterward shown by his appointment as consul general to Esch, a post which was occupied since he was born in Philadelphia in 1861 and graduated at Harvard and at the Columbia Law school, studying international law afterward at Paris. He received a certificate of proficiency in the Russian language from the College de France.

Governor Albert B. Mead of the state of Washington, who strongly opposes naturalization of Japanese, was chosen to the gubernatorial office two years ago. He is forty-five years of age and a native of Kansas. He has served as mayor of Billings, as a prosecuting attorney and as a member of the legislature. Speaking of the Japanese question, the governor says: "Naturalization of the Japanese would tend to degrade the American workman. The sacred right of American citizenship, acquired as it was by the blood of our forefathers, should not be lightly handed over to another race, and especially foreigners of the Asiatic coast. We are very near to the countries of the orient, whose teeming millions could be poured in upon our shores should we throw down the bars to them. The two races will not assimilate. China is laughing in her sleeve. Should Japan succeed in obtaining citizenship rights China would come to the front at once with a similar demand."

"We cannot extend our citizenship rights to one Asiatic country without doing the same to the other. I have great admiration for the president, but I believe he is wrong in this matter. The Japanese are poorly fitted to become American citizens."

Miss Julia Richman, district superintendent of public schools in New York, is not only an efficient supervisor of education, but is noted also as a settlement worker. The new settlement house opened on East Broadway, New York, not long ago under her management was started especially for the purpose of enlisting the interest of those engaged in work for the uplifting of the tenement dwellers. Speaking of her ideas on the subject, Miss Richman said:

"It is the purpose of this settlement to bring the teachers of the district together as much as to benefit the community. Besides this, I am anxious to have the parents and school children with whom I come in contact recognize me as one interested in all that concerns them rather than as a territorial person carrying in my hand a good stout club called 'justice.' I want them to know me as a woman rather than as an official."

"I fancy, however, that my presence here will have a good effect on the obstreperous children that cause trouble with janitors, for I have already succeeded in subduing the spirit of one small truant of twelve. The janitor of the house has threatened to turn out the whole family if this boy is not controlled. I have paroled him and threatened not to let him live in the same block with me unless he behaves. He thinks I really have the power and has done wonders already."

Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, who introduced in the senate the resolution calling on the president and secretary of war for information regarding the discharge of the negro troops of the Second battalion, Twenty-fifth Infantry, succeeded J. Donald Cameron and took his seat in 1907. He is a Nimrod of established prowess. The senator's favorite field is the far northwest. Dr. Fish Columbia and the Northwest Territories and Alaska. The first time he crossed the line into the dominion of King Edward he moved a parallel or two out of the boundary, then in dispute, but since won, and built his camp at an elevation of 8000 ft above sea level. There he lived for weeks, making frequent excursions into the fastnesses of the game. Great bears abound, but the senator found more delight in hunting mountain goats, the most difficult four footed animals in all the world to bring down with a rifle.

He did not return with an empty bag. Several of the big horned goats fell before his unerring aim. The senator brought his trophies back to Pennsylvania to make good his reputation as a hunter.

ADVICE TO COOKS

Oyster Talks
If you want your oyster stew to be good, you must first be sure that your oysters are good. Always use Sealright Oysters and then you can be sure of their quality. All others are so full of stale water and foul "embalming" powders that they are apt to make the milk curdle.

Sealright Oysters come from the oyster beds in a porcelain, enamel-lined case, as clean and wholesome as any dish in your kitchen. They are sealed as soon as shucked and ice is packed around them—not in them.
