ACREAGE OF PRUNES IS BEING REDUCED

Vancouver, Wash., March 6.—The prune acreage of Clark county is fast being diminished. Why it is hard to say. It is true that the past few seasons have been unfavorable for the growth of this fruit, but such seasons have been the exception.

In Fruit Valley between 50 and 60 acres of prune trees are being pulled up this winter. A part of these are on land purchased by the railroad and this could not be helped. Out on the plains a large number of trees are being pulled up, and it is probable the coming year will see the prune acreage of that section reduced nearly one-half. The orchard on the track within the race track property is being removed to make room for building sites.

It has been claimed that there are 5000 acres of prunes in Clark county but reliable and conservative estimates place the acreage at 4000. Fully 400 acres of these are being torn up this year.
