WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3

UNIVERSITY WILL GROW

There is little to be said upon the subject of the referendum against the State University appropriation. That the money is badly needed by the institution, and that failure to receive it will be a serious blow is admitted by all who have studied the situation carefully. That a repetition of the arguments in favor of the expenditure would have the least effect upon the promoters of the referendum movement there is not the slightest hope; they have set out on a wrong course and, while admitting it to a great extent, lack the manliness to turn back and make amends.

As sure as Oregon is destined to be a great state, its highest institution will live and prosper, despite the efforts of puny minds to retard the progress of education. It may take years to overcome the injury done at this time but its friends will be drawn closer to it by such unjust efforts to hamper its usefulness, and their more loyal support will in a measure atone for the inconveniences suffered. Some day a majority of those who sign the referendum petition will wish they might expunge the record of their act that will remain permanently on file in the secretary of state's office, for it is no small or idle matter to write one's self down as an enemy of an institution that is educating boys and girls who lead the Northwest, if not the entire Pacific coast, in all lines of approved mental and physical effort—in the field of athletics, of oratory, of scholarship.

HARRIMAN'S EXTRAVAGANCE

Eugene's new passenger depot, promised so long ,is not likely to materialize this year. A few carloads of white sand spread over the grounds will probably be the extent of the improvements made, and even this will be appreciated by the patrons of the company , who find it drier under foot while they are standing out in the rain waiting for delayed trains to come in.

It is a remarkable display of liberality on the part of the Harriman interests to expend $50 for the comfort and convenience of the people of Eugene, who pay only a paltry $80,000 a month in freight and fares; and if the appropriation was authorized by the New York headquarters we opine that it may be taken as an indication that a broader policy regarding accommodations and betterments has been adopted. That the present passenger shed will be treated to a new coat of paint in the course of three or four years may now be confidently predicted.

DISCREDITABLE TO BOTH

It seems to keep our strenuous president pretty busy these days "branding" liars and coining new and more emphatic denunciatory phrases to fit the prevaricators. The Storer incident, the ex-Senator Chandler episode and half a dozen others furnished front page stories for the daily papers, but the Harriman sensation quite eclipses the others, and promises to provide news per copy for some days to come.

Here we have the president of the United States and the foremost railroad man of the world daily accusing each other of lying and sundry other crimes and misdemeanors. It is a sorry spectacle from any point of view and neither is likely to come out of it with anything that will inure to his credit.

The people of Lane county are watching to see what figure will be set upon the S. P. Company's roadbed in this year's assessment. The corporations have not heretofore borne their share of the burdens of taxation and should no longer be allowed to shift the burden upon the shoulders of those lass able to bear them.

Roosevelt says that E. H. Harriman is several different kinds of a liar. Whether the president is right may be an open question, but if he referred to the railroad king's Oregon managers who have been promising Eugene a new depot with clocklike regularity for several years past, Teddy has scored another bull's eye.

If the railroad magnates think curtailing improvements and discharging men, in the face of their known inability to promptly handle all the freight offered them, will increase public confidence in their methods, they have another guess coming to them, and they would better make it quick.

Though its first attempt was nipped to an early death, the simplified spelling board is about to hold its first annual meeting, but whether to weep over the corpse or try to resurrect it deponent saith not.

Every town that has a yellow journal has, or is preparing to have, the most beautiful girl in the country, and there isn't one of the girls that can hold a candle to scores of our girls, either in looks or usefulness.

With the baseball season about to open it will be difficult to interest Americans in another Franco-German wrangle over Morocco. Horseshide has the call on the limelight on this side of the pond.

It must have been excessive modesty that caused Joe Cannon to declare: "I am not an expert," as everybody knows that in his line—legislation—he stands at the very top of the expert bunch.

For a man who has declared himself to be out of politics, Billy Hearst took an extraordinary interest in the Chicago municipal campaign, and with the usual result.

Congressman Foster, of Indiana, found out one thing while on the isthmus that can be safely banked on—that the cost will probably exceed the estimates.

That Italian scientist who claimed to have discovered that fish can hear "ain't so much." The interstate commerce commission has absolute proof in its possession that Fish can lie.

The Albany Democrat says of the U. of O. referendum: "While they are at it they should also refer the O. A. C. appropriation to the people."

Solomon was a silly guy compared to the man who seriously preached that everybody should stop work in order to starve out the rich.

Mayor Schmitz is well past the bouquet and banquet stage and seemingly is about to enter the aged egg section of his varied career.

Grover Cleveland furnished another proof—large and imposing—that the habit of giving advice, once acquired, cannot be shaken off.

Ambassador Bryce would better take out an accident policy on his digestive apparatus or cut out a few of the banquets.

Of course Grover Cleveland smiled when he said "I am not a friend of the trusts." So did almost everybody else.

Paving in Oregon Cities.

(Ashland Tidings.)

The Eugene city council at a meeting last week awarded to the Warren Construction Company of Portland, the contract for paving Willamette street from the Southern Pacific depot up to Eleventh street, a distance of seven blocks, with bithulithic pavement. The contract provides that the pavement shall not be laid before the Willamette Valley Company lays its street railway tracks on the street, work on which is now about to begin. At the meeting a majority of the owners of property on East Ninth street, from Wilamette to Pearl, a distance of two blocks, petitioned that the council pave that portion of the street. Property owners on other streets are said to be figuring on such a movement, and it is probable that before the summer is over almost the entire business district of the city will have decided for paving.

Salem has authorized asphalt paving for three blocks in the business district.

Baker City has joined the ranks of progressive Oregon cities and enlisted in the campaign for paved streets.

COTTAGE GROVE NOTES

Chas. Noel and Wm. Whittaker, carpenters at the Vesuvius mine, finished their work and returned to their homes in Eugene Monday. They said that the high trestle connecting the Wild Hog tunnel with the mill was completed and was an imposing sight, the highest bent standing 96 feet high, the ore shoot being 125 feet in length. The entire length of the trestle is 550 feet.

The M. B. A. celebrated the tenth anniversary of their existence in Cottage Grove Monday evening by giving a musical and literary program, social and refreshments, and to add to the enjoyment of the evening Miss Mabel Lee was informed that it was the occasion of another anniversary, her 21st birthday, and a beautiful gold chain was presented to her by her friends in the order.—Nugget.

ARRANGEMENT OF LIBRARY BUILDING

The library building at the university is so far along that a very good idea as to how it will be arranged and will appear on the inside may be obtained. The basement will have some books of the less used sorts, but the rooms there will be taken up with a bindery, library employes' rooms, and similar needs. On the first floor proper will be a large reference room, a periodical department, besides those filled with shelves for the holding of books. There will also be a rest room there. On the second floor, until the demands of the library become greater, there will be class rooms, the departments using the reference libraries most being located there.

The library will be installed by the time the semester opens next fall. The rooms occupied by the library in the dormitory will be converted back to their original purpose.
