PEACHES WILL BE BIG PRICE THIS YEAR

The luscious peach, which so many Oregonians place as the queen of all fruits, will be paid for this year at high prices, according to the reports of the crop in Lane county. Southern Oregon and California. Some orchards around Eugene have a good yield, but others are very barren, and it is not unlikely that a local demand would easily take care of all the Lane product and still ask for more.

California and Southern Oregon crops are anything but bountiful, and with the increased demand for all the best fruits from every part of the country, prices are certain to soar as far as peaches are concerned.

Apples are said to be just a fast crop this year in Lane county. Last year this kind of all fruits had a bumper yield, and now in concurrence with the off year theory, the trees have followed the rule, though what they bear will probably on the average be of better quality.

ROYAL ANN CHERRIES MADE TO BEAR

J. R. Campbell has just had the several acres of Royal Anne cherries in the Campbell orchard near town on the Blair donation claim budded by S. D. Weaver, an experienced nurseryman.

The Royal Ann is an uncertain self fertilizer, but in the past few years orchardists have come to know that this in a manner sexual weakness of this very marketable cherry can be remedied by planting other cherries that blossom with the Royal Ann contiguous to them. For instance the Dunn Land Company has every fifth row planted to Black Republicans and their Royal Anns bear heavily, while Neahlon Harlow, after several failures of his cherries to bear a full crop, has obtained the same result by budding in a cherry that has about the same color and firmness, though smaller, and ships with it.

About a thousand buds were put in the Campbell orchard, the stock being secured from a Governor Wood tree at Dr. Biddle's residence. The fruit of this tree greatly resembles the Royal Ann in size, color and quality, and Dr. Biddle says it has not failed of a full crop for years.
