JOAQUIN NOT CANDIDATE FOR SENATORIAL TOGA

"Too much talk about George. All Georges. I got all I want of it." With those ill-fated words Joaquin Miller, the "Poet of the Sierras," and Oregon's native son and bard, withdrew from the United States senatorial race late yesterday afternoon, says the Portland Telegram.

Like Vice President Fairbanks, Secretaries Garfield and Strauss and numerous other celebrities who have been making long journeys feeling the political pulse of the people, the long-whiskered singer of rhymes has been holding his ear to the ground and he didn't like the noise. His senatorial timber has taken to the woods. He now plans to inaugurate a campaign for the presidency on the "nature faker" platform, according to his present plans and intentions. The venerable bard arrived in Portland from a trip through the state yesterday, and was in a particularly affable frame of mind.

"Young man," he remarked, "I want you to read that story of mine in the magazine you have there, mentioning the name of the magazine and the title of the story, 'Damning the Sacramento,' and if you will promise to do that I will confide a deep secret to you."

The promise was made.

"Now, my young friend," continued the sage, stroking his well-groomed whiskers, "I have just returned from a trip over east of the mountains, and I have decided not to run for United States senator. I don't think the public at large cares whether there is a mellifluous harmony of words in the congressional directory. I don't think the people of Oregon care to hear stump speeches that rhyme in the cause of my senatorial ambitions. I admit I had ambitions, and had them as bad as the next one, but what's the use?"

"What's the matter with Oregon—too much Chamberlain?" he was asked.

"That's it exactly, young man. You've hit the nail on the head. Too much George altogether."

"As to the future, Mr. Miller?"

"All settled. I don't care a rap to wear a toga as long as I have my cowboy boots, and waving hat. I want to be president of the United States. Tut, tut, there I'm not joking. I'm serious now. I see where I made my mistake in not announcing myself for the candidacy months ago. I'm afraid people will think me vacillating, but I took this trip of mine just to see how the people in the state feel about it. I have plenty of great and influential friends in other states, and I think I can go into the next Democratic national convention with a good showing of delegates pledged to vote for me."

"What will be your platform?"

"That will be the essence?" asked the reporter.

"Now let's see. The usual ones, of course, and as a paramount issue I shall stand on the 'nature faker' platform. I have lived closely enough to nature all my life to tell the real thing from a fake, and if I couldn't elevate the literary tone of the presidential message to congress I miss my guess."

Here the political bard of Oregon insisted upon buying his first political cigars in the interests of his visions of the White House, and five minutes later he had collared D. M. Watson, the near friend of W. J. Bryan. It was the first gun of the Joaquin Miller presidential campaign.

Portland Journal: Joaquin Miller, "Poet of the Sierras," is in town preparing for a trip into the Siuslaw country, 40 miles from Eugene, where, with his brother, he is planning to construct an immense power plant to furnish electricity to Eugene and points in the vicinity. Mr. Miller says he has never spent a more pleasant six weeks than this last trip to Oregon, and intends to make his home near the haunts of his earlier life for the rest of his days.

Gilbert-Striker.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gilbert on Wednesday evening the marriage of their daughter, Miss Pearl Ida Gilbert, to Mr. Arthur C. Striker was solemnized in the presence of about thirty-five guests.

For the occasion, the Gilbert home on Olive street was transformed into a bower house of beauty, with marguerites and ferns, and the parlor, where the rite ceremony was performed, was especially noteworthy for its beauty, the arch under which the happy couple took their stand being composed of the white flowers, and the walls being likewise decorated with the ferns and flowers. Both the bride and the groom were unattended. Mrs. A. J. DeLin presided at the piano and as she played soft notes from the Orange Wedding March the couple entered the parlor and took their accustomed places, where Rev. H. N. Mount pronounced the impressive ceremony that made the two man and wife.

After congratulations had been extended, the bride threw her bouquet of white marguerites, it being caught by her cousin, Miss Pearl Gilbert.

The bride and groom are among the best known people of the younger set of the city. Miss Gilbert acted as Goddess of Liberty at the celebration here on the Fourth of July. Mr. Striker is the son of A. N. Striker and is engaged with his father in the constructing and engineering of bridges.

Mr. and Mrs. Striker left Thursday morning for Lowell, where the groom is at work on a contract. They will return later and make this city their future home.

Mrs. F. W. Osburn and Mrs. Geo. Lilley are enjoying the wonders in Yellowstone Park.

Mrs. H. C. Mahon left yesterday for an outing on the upper McKenzie. Before returning she will take in the beautiful climate at Belknap Springs.

Charles Watts and a party of friends enjoyed a launching party on the Willamette on Wednesday evening. After some time spent on the water, the party landed on the island by Sladden's Reef, built a large bonfire and enjoyed a light luncheon. While gathered around the bonfire, a fine view was had of the partial eclipse of the moon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Potter and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Burden are enjoying a short vacation at O'Brien's, on the McKenzie.

The Misses Carrie and Genevieve Elapass were the hostesses on Wednesday afternoon at a picnic party on the banks of the Willamette. Quite a number of their friends journeyed to one of the many cool spots along the river in the early afternoon and had an enjoyable time playing games, telling stories and discussing an elaborate picnic luncheon.

The Misses Dunn entertained Miss Grace Cheshire of Portland with a boating party on Wednesday evening. The party left the city late in the afternoon in boats and canoes and arrived at the head of the race in time to build a large bonfire over which supper was cooked. The party had the rare opportunity to see the eclipse of the moon during the evening and later floated down the race with the bright light as their guide. Those who were in the party were as follows: The Misses Mabel Johnson, Jessie Linton, Ruby Dunn, Grace Cheshire, Marguerite Dunn, Grace Dunn, Lillian Quiner and the Messrs. Walter O'Connell, Wayne Hard, Harry Winstanley, Herbert Roome, Lloyd Brooks and Milton Burton.

Miss Cheshire, who has been visiting the Misses Dunn for the past few weeks, returned to her home in Portland Thursday.

On Thursday evening Mrs. W. W. Branstetter and Mrs. W. W. McCornack entertained a number of their gentlemen and lady friends at the home of the former on West Seventh street in honor of Mrs. Ida Bolton and Miss Leone Jenkins. Music and conversation helped to pass a pleasant evening, which was brought to a close by the serving of an elaborate luncheon in the dining room, which had been arranged and decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Bolton and Miss Jenkins left for Portland this morning to remain during the balance of the summer.

The W. R. P. L. was entertained by Mrs. S. F. Korna on North Washington street this afternoon. The fine was spent with the usual pastimes and an elegant luncheon was served.

The dancing party given in Davies' hall last night by the theatre orchestra after the band concert in the park was largely attended and was a social success.

UNSIGHTLY RELIC OF ANTI-BELLUM DAYS IN SOUTH

(Special Correspondence.)

Memphis, Tenn., July 17, 1907.—Grim, unsightly, painless, seamed and crooked throughout its masonry, there stands today an old brick building on Adams street, about which clusters more of history and of change than can be compressed into song or story. It is situated just on the east of the alley midway between Main and Second streets and is used as a shelter for the city prisoners who are worked on the rock pile.

I was told to take the trouble to step to the westward side of this old building where it faces the alley, and to glance up along its second story. Upon doing this I discerned this inscription: "Negro Mart and Livery Stable." Time had obliterated a portion of the sign. The last letter of the word "Mart" and the last letter of the word "Stables" are gone. The others are dimmed with age and would pass unnoticed had not my attention been called to the same.

Time was, nearly half a century ago, when this was a famous negro market. It was presided over in its time by no less a personage than General Forrest himself. Thousands of negroes were bought and sold within this market, and hundreds of thousands of dollars passed there from buyer to seller. One old negro whom I was told knew its history, was questioned by me and he said in answer to my questions, "I've seen more'n a bushel o' money piled up heah on the upstalls foh—gold money, sah, in de ole days. Tell you what, sah, looked mighty good money, sah. Yes, sah, I 'members Gin' Forrest, sah, an he was de beat-estest man I evah seen, sah. He gone, sah, and he only done t'ole 'em onet, sah!"

VALLEY TROLLEY LINE IN OPERATION BY OCT. 15

Guy W. Talbot, manager of the General Electric Company, which is building an electric line up the valley from Portland, was in the city this morning on C. & E. business. He reported that cars will positively be running to Salem by October 15 of this year. As to extension southward he would not say, but it is said to be the plan of the company eventually to run the line as far south as Roseburg.
