EUGENE WILL DOUBLE IN SIZE IN THREE YEARS

Eugene is rapidly coming to the front as a railroad and business center. The operation of passenger trains over the Wendling branch was a decided recognition of the growing importance of this city by the Southern Pacific and the building of new freight and passenger depots this fall and the reconstruction of the railroad yards will further emphasize the fact. We may look forward also to an early change in the schedule which will bring the Albany-Springfield trains into this city, making it the terminal of that branch line.

In addition to the Southern Pacific train service it is reasonably certain that the Eugene & Eastern electric road will be constructed without any suspension of operations, reaching into, draining and developing one of the richest sections fifty miles to the eastward, in agriculture, timber and mineral, in the state of Oregon, and pouring its great volume of business into Eugene. This, with a line westward to the Siuslaw, will make a centre of business activity here surpassed in Oregon only by Portland, and enough to justify the building of a city of 50,000 or 75,000 population.

With its railroads, mills, great educational facilities and splendid public improvements, now under way, Eugene should double in population in three years—and then it will have just begun to grow.

WORK OF PAVING SHOULD BE RUSHED

The city council meets tonight and the matter of hurrying the work of paving along should be taken up. August is now half gone and very little more than a start has been made on Willamette street, indicating that when the first fall rains come next month they will find even our main thoroughfare torn up and in an almost impassable condition. The paving company has been unaccountably slow and is employing a force so small that the resumption of work at the rock crusher has compelled it to take all its men off the street today, and work is virtually at a standstill.

Not only is Willamette street likely to be unfinished when the fall rains come, but several blocks of cross streets ought to be improved in order that we may get the benefit of the paving of that street. Otherwise the mud from Seventh, Eighth and Ninth streets will be spread over Willamette street pavement next winter by all kinds of vehicles until it will be little better than in an unpaved condition.

The Warren Construction Company was anxious to get these contracts, promising to do the work promptly, and the city council should instruct its street committee to interview the management of the company with a view to having operations carried on in a more energetic manner with an increased force of workmen.

OFFICIAL COAL MINING IN STATE OF OREGON

Evidently the United States Geological department has not had any late reports from Lane county's coal mining operations at Spencer Butte and elsewhere, since it leaves this section out entirely in a bulletin just issued to the newspapers, and released for publication today. This bulletin says of "Coal in Oregon":

"The only productive coal field in Oregon is situated in the southwestern part of the state, in Coos county, and is known as the Coos Bay field, from the fact that it entirely surrounds that body of water. It occupies a total area of about 250 square miles, its length north and south being about 30 miles and its maximum breadth at the middle about eleven miles, from which it tapers regularly at both ends.

"Other coal fields have been prospected in different parts of the state, and some of them contain coal of fairly good quality. Among these are the upper Nehalem field, in Columbia county; the lower Nehalem field, in Clatsop and Tillamook counties; the Yaquina field, in Lincoln county; and the Eekley and Shasta Costa fields, in Curry county. All of these fields lie west of the Cascade Range, but none have been developed to the point of production. Another field has been located in the basin of the John Day river, east of the Cascade range, but little is known concerning it. All of the fields west of the range, with the exception of the Coos Bay, are of small area, the largest outside of the Coos Bay being the upper Nehalem, which has an area of less than twenty miles. The coal of all these fields is lignitic in character.

"Coal mining in Oregon during the last two years has been adversely affected by the increase in the production of petroleum in California and its use as fuel. All of the product from Coos Bay has been shipped by water, principally to San Francisco. The increased use of fuel oil in that city has decreased the consumption of coal to a marked degree, and the effect upon Oregon's product is shown in a decrease from 109,641 short tons in 1905 to 79,731 tons in 1906, a loss of 29,910 tons, or 27.3 per cent. The value declined $70,157, or 24.8 per cent, from $282,495 in 1905 to $212,338 in 1906."

Wouldn't it be delightful if all loafer knockers could be gathered into one town where they could not hamper those who are really trying to build up centres of business, suggests an exchange. And if all of them in the United States could be in one town it would outshine New York so far as numbers would be concerned, but it would soon be deserted. If there is any one thing a knocker cannot stand for it is another knocker.

The Buffalo preacher who insists that hades is full of peek-a-boo waists is on the wrong tack. Where there are peek-a-boo waists there are plump girls, and where there are plump girls most men desire to be.

That war scare is so dead that even the official announcement that Japan had placed a hurry order for 150,000 rifles and a lot of field guns could not galvanize it into a semblance of life.

Great interest is felt by manipulators of get-rich-quick games in the population of Mars—they are figuring on unloading millions of worthless securities on them before they get wise.

What's the matter with Mexico? Must calculate on doing some shooting, as it is erecting a smokeless powder plant with a capacity of 250,000 pounds a year.

Wasn't it a little unkind for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat to remind Japan that Korea is geographically situated to be to Japan what Ireland has been to England?

Senator J. B. Foraker is of the opinion that Taft's thanks are altogether out of proportion with what he got or will get from Ohio.

Make way, gentlemen, for the Landis presidential boom. It's brand new, but has wonderful speed possibilities.

And now comes the worst nature faker of them all, claiming that there is a pretty summer girl at a popular resort who will not flirt.

A political party may have Jonahs and still be able to produce a Moses—by breaking away from the Jonahs.

WHEN THE CURTAIN IS DOWN

When the curtain is down and the lights are out,
And the songs and laughter have died away,
With only the empty scene about,
How hollow and cheap is our little play.

When paint and powder are all laid by,
And the gaudy tinsel no longer shines,
And we find what we thought the blue of the sky
To be as false as the players' lines.

When the mask is dropped and we see at last
Beneath the smirk of the shallow clown
May we find no friend whom we love is cast,
In a different role with the curtain down.

A CRY OF THE TIMES

It isn't the war talk that frets me,
The times I am reading the news;
It isn't the weather that gets me
Into such a state of the blues;
It isn't the truisms—they're a bubble
And not worth a tear of my grief;
I'll tell you the cause of my trouble:
They've boosted the price of my beef.

It isn't the tariff that worries,
It isn't the state of the crops;
It isn't the stock market flurries,
What odds if price rises or drops?
It isn't the peach crop that galls me,
It isn't just plain discontent;
I'll tell you the woe that befalls me—
The landlord is raising my rent.

It isn't that I am a kicker,
It isn't I'm out of a job;
It isn't a craving for liquor,
It isn't for praise of a mob;
It isn't I'm given to yearning
For clothes of fine linen or silk,
The secret of all my heart-burning—
They've increased the price of my milk.

It isn't because I'm not wealthy,
It isn't because of my work;
It isn't because I'm not healthy,
It isn't because I would shrink;
It isn't because I'm not getting
Of these worldly goods a big slice;
The reason of all this fretting—
They've doubled the price of my lice.

It isn't the panic that's pending,
It isn't some grief that is past;
It isn't a fear of the ending
Of good times—so good they won't last;
It isn't the break of some bubble,
My worry's of something far worse;
I'll tell you the source of my trouble:
The times are too good for my purse.
