

The Temptation of Samuel Burge

By W. W. JACOBS

Copyright, 1905, by William W. Jacobs

MR. HIGGS, jeweler, sat in the small parlor behind his shop gazing hungrily at a supper table which had been laid some time before. It was a quarter to 10 by the small town clock on the mantelpiece, and the jeweler, rubbing his hands over the fire, tried in vain to remember what etiquette had to do with starting a meal before the arrival of an expected guest.

"He must be coming by the last train after all, sir," said the housekeeper, entering the room and glancing at the clock. "I suppose these London gentlemen keep such late hours they don't understand our country folk wanting to get to bed in decent time. You must be wanting your supper, sir."

Mr. Higgs sighed. "I shall be glad of my supper," he said slowly, "but I dare say our friend is hungrier still. Traveling is hungry work."

"Perhaps he is thinking over his words for the seventh day," said the housekeeper solemnly; "forgetting hunger and thirst and all our poor earthly feelings in the blessedness of his work."

"Perhaps so," assented the other, whose own earthly feelings were particularly strong just at that moment. "Brother Simpson used to forget all about mealtimes when he stayed here," said the housekeeper, clasping her hands. "He used to sit by the window with his eyes half closed and shake his head at the smell from the kitchen and call it despatches of Egypt. He said that if it wasn't for keeping up his strength for the work luscious bread and fair water was all he wanted. I expect Brother Burge will be a similar sort of man."

"Brother Clark wrote and told me that he only lives for the work," said the jeweler, with another glance at the clock. "The chapel at Clerkenwell is crowded to hear him. It's a blessed favor and privilege to have such a selected instrument staying in the house. I'm curious to see him. From what Brother Clark said I rather fancy that he was a little bit wild in his younger days."

"Halleluia!" exclaimed the housekeeper with fervor. "I mean to think as he's seen the error of his ways," she added sharply as her master looked up. "There he is," said the latter as the bell rang.

The housekeeper went to the side door and, drawing back the bolt, admitted the gentleman whose preaching had done so much for the small but select sect known as the Seventh Day Primitive Apostles. She came back into the room, followed by a tall stout man, whose upper lip and short stubby beard streaked with gray seemed a poor match for the beady eyes which lurked behind a pair of clumsy spectacles.

"Brother Samuel Burge?" inquired the jeweler, rising.

The visitor nodded and, regarding him with a smile charged with fraternal love, took his hand in a huge grip and shook it fervently.

"I am glad to see you, Brother Higgs," he said, regarding him fondly.

Brother Samuel Burge? Inquired the jeweler, rising.

"Oh, 'ow my eyes have yearned to be set upon you! Oh, 'ow my ears 'ave longed to hearken unto the words of your voice!"

He breathed thickly and, taking a seat with his hands upon his knees, looked at a fine piece of cold beef which the housekeeper had just placed upon the table.

"Is Brother Clark well?" inquired the jeweler, placing a chair for him at the table and taking up his carving knife. "Dear Brother Clark is in excellent health, I thank you," said the other, taking the proffered chair. "Oh, what a good he is! What a instrument for good-always stretching out them blessed hands of 'is to make one of us fall a Seventh Day Primitive!"

"And success attends his efforts?" said the jeweler.

"Success?" repeated Mr. Higgs, eating rapidly and gesturing with his knife. "Success ain't no word for it. Why, since this day last week he has saved three pickpockets."

two Salvationists, one bigamist and a Roman Catholic."

Brother Higgs murmured his admiration. "You are also a power for good," he said wistfully. "Brother Clark tells me in his letter that your exhortations have been abundantly blessed."

Mr. Burge shook his head. "A lot of it falls by the wayside," he said modestly, "but some of it is an eye opener to them as don't entirely shut their ears. Only the day before yesterday I sent me with a letter saying 'ow the owner had no further use for 'em'."

The jeweler's eyes glistened with admiration not quite mingled with envy. "Have you expounded the word for long?" he inquired.

"Six months," replied the other. "It come to me quite natural. I was on the penitential bench on the Saturday, and the Wednesday afterward I preached as good a sermon as ever I've preached in my life. Brother Clark said it took 'is breath away."

"And he's a judge, too," said the admiring jeweler.

"Now," continued Brother Burge, helping himself plentifully to pickled walnuts—"now there ain't standing room in our bettel when I'm expounding. People come to hear me from all parts, old and young, rich and poor, and the Apostles that don't come early 'ave to stand outside and catch the crumbs I throw 'em through the windows."

"It is enough," sighed Brother Higgs, whose own audience was frequently content to be on the wrong side of the window, "it is enough to make a man vain."

"I struggle against it, brother," said Mr. Burge, passing his cup up for some more tea. "I fight against it hard, but once the evil one was almost too much for me, and in spite of myself and knowing besides that it was a plot of 'is I nearly felt uplifted."

Brother Higgs, passing him some more beef, pressed for details.

"He sent me two policemen," replied the other, scowling at the meanness of the trick. "One I might 'ave stood, but two come to being pretty near too much for me. They sat under me while I gave 'em the word 'ot and strong, and the feeling I had standing up there and telling policemen what they ought to do I shall never forget."

"But why should policemen make you proud?" asked his puzzled listener.

Mr. Burge looked puzzled in his turn. "Why, hasn't Brother Clark told you about me?" he inquired.

Mr. Higgs shook his head. "He sort of suggested that—that you had been a little bit wild before you came to us," he murmured apologetically.

"A little—bit—wild?" repeated Brother Burge, in horrified accents.

"Me? A little bit wild?" said the jeweler hurriedly. "Being such a good man himself, no doubt thinks would seem wild to him that wouldn't to us—like me, I mean."

"A little bit wild," said his visitor again. "Sam Burge, the converted burglar, a little bit wild. Well, well!"

"Converted what?" shouted the jeweler, half rising from his chair.

"Burglar," said the other shortly. "Why, I should think I know more about the inside of jails than anybody in England. I've pretty near killed three policemen, besides breaking a gent's leg and throwing a footman out of window, and then Brother Clark goes and says I've been a little bit wild! I wonder what he would 'ave?"

"But you—yourself quite reformed now?" said the jeweler, resuming his seat and making a great effort to hide his consternation.

"I 'ope so," said Mr. Burge, with alarming humility. "But it's an uncertain world, and far be it from me to boast. That's why I've come here."

Mr. Higgs, only half comprehending, sat back grinning.

"If I can stand this," pursued Brother Burge, gestulating wildly in the direction of the shop, "I can stand being here with all these 'ere pretty little things to be 'ad for the trouble of picking of 'em up, I can stand anything. 'Tempt me, I says to Brother Clark. 'Put me in the way o' temptation,' I says. 'Let me see whether the evil one or me is the strongest; let me 'ave a good old up and down with the powers o' darkness and see who wins.'"

Mr. Higgs, gripping the edge of the table with both hands, gazed at the new Michael in speechless consternation.

"I think I see his face now," said Brother Burge with tender enthusiasm. "All in a glow it was, and he patted me on the shoulder and says, 'I'll send you on a week's mission to Duncombe,' he says, and 'you shall stop with Brother Higgs, who's a shop full o' cunning wrought vanities in silver and gold.'"

"But suppose," said the jeweler, finding his voice by a great effort, "suppose victory is not given unto you?"

"It won't make any difference," replied his visitor. "Brother Clark promised that it shouldn't. 'If you fail, brother,' he says, 'we'll help you up again. When you are tired of sin come back to us. There's always a welcome.'"

"But—" began the dismayed jeweler. "We can only do our best," said Brother Burge; "the rest we must leave. I've girded my loins for the fray and taken much spiritual sustenance on the way down from this little hymn book."

Mr. Higgs paid no heed. He sat marveling over the fatuousness of Brother Clark and trying to think of ways and means out of the dilemma into which that gentleman's perverted logic had placed him. He wondered whether it would be possible to induce Brother Burge to sleep elsewhere by offering to bear his hotel expenses, and at last, after some meditation, broached the subject.

"What?" exclaimed the other, pushing his plate from him and regarding him with great severity. "Go and sleep at a hotel? After Brother Clark has been and took all this trouble? Why, I wouldn't think of doing such a thing."

"Brother Clark has no right to expose you to such a trial," said Mr. Higgs with great warmth.

"I wonder what he'd say if he 'eard you," remarked Mr. Burge sternly. "After his going and making all these arrangements, for you to try and upset 'em. To ask me to slum the fight like a coward; to ask me to go and hide in the rear ranks in a hotel with everything locked up, with nothing to steal."

"I should sleep far more comfortably if I knew that you were not undergoing this tremendous strain," said the unhappy Mr. Higgs, "and besides that, if you did give way it would be a serious business for me, that's what I want you to look at. I am afraid that if—unhappily you did fall I couldn't prevent you."

"I'm sure you couldn't," said the other cordially. "That's the beauty of it; that's when the evil one's whispers get louder and louder. Why, I could choke you between my finger and thumb. If unfortunately my fallen nature should be too strong for me, don't interfere whatever you do. I mightn't be myself."

Mr. Higgs rose and faced him gasping. "Not even call for the police, I suppose," he jerked out.

"That would be interfering," said Brother Burge coldly.

The jeweler tried to think. It was past 11. The housekeeper had gone to spend the night with an ailing sister and a furtive glance at Brother Burge's small shifty eyes and fat unwholesome face was sufficient to deter him from leaving him alone with his property, while he went to ask the police to give an eye to his house for the night. Besides it was more than probable that Mr. Burge would decline to allow such a proceeding. With a growing sense of his peril he resolved to try flattery.

"It was a great thing for the brethren to secure a man like you," he said. "I never thought they'd 'ad done it. I said Mr. Burge frankly. 'I've 'ad all sorts trying to convert me, crying over me and praying over me. I remember the first dear good man that called me a lost lamb. He didn't say anything else for a month.'"

"So upset," hazarded the jeweler.

"I broke his jaw, pore feller," said Brother Burge, a sad but withal indolgent smile lighting up his face at the vagaries of his former career. "What time do you go to bed, brother?"

"Any time," said the other reluctantly. "I suppose you are tired with your journey?"

Mr. Burge assented and, rising from his chair, yawned loudly and stretched himself. In the small room with his huge arms raised he looked colossal.

"I suppose," said the jeweler, still seeking to reassure himself; "I suppose dear Brother Clark felt pretty certain of you, else he wouldn't have sent you here?"

"Brother Clark said, 'What is a jeweler's shop compared with a 'uman soul, a priceless 'uman soul?'" replied Mr. Burge. "What is a few gewgaws to decorate them that perish and make them vain when you come to consider the opportunity of such a trial and the good it'll do and the draw it'll be—I do win—and testify to the congregation to that effect? Why, there's sermons for a lifetime in it!"

"So there is," said the jeweler, trying to look cheerful. "You've got a good face, Brother Burge, and you'll do a lot of good by your preaching. There is honesty written in every feature."

Mr. Burge turned and surveyed himself in the small pier glass. "Yes," he said, somewhat disconcertedly, "I don't look enough like a burglar to suit some of 'em."

"Same people are hard to please," said the other warmly.

Mr. Burge started and eyed him thoughtfully, and then as Mr. Higgs, after some hesitation, walked into the shop to turn the gas out stood in the doorway watching him. A smothered sigh as he glanced round the shop bore witness to the state of his feelings.

The jeweler hesitated again in the parlor and then, biding Brother Burge his candle turned on the gas and led the way slowly upstairs to the room which had been prepared for the honored visitor. He shook hands at the door and bade him an effusive good night, his voice trembling despite himself as he expressed a hope that Mr. Burge would sleep well. He added casually that he himself was a very light sleeper.

Twelve o'clock struck from the tower of the parish church and was followed almost directly by the tall clock standing in the hall downstairs. Scarcely had the sounds died away than a low moaning from the next room caused the frightened jeweler to start from his chair and place his ear against the wall. Two or three hollow groans came through the plaster, followed by ejaculations which showed clearly that Brother Burge was at that moment engaged in a terrible combat with the powers of darkness to decide whether he should or should not rife his host's shop. His hands clenched and his ear shop. His hands clenched and his ear pressed close to the wall, the jeweler listened to a monologue which increased in interest with every word.

"I tell you I won't," said the voice in the next room with a groan. "I won't get these behind me—Get these—No and don't shove me over to the door."

If you can't get behind me without doing that, stay where you are. Yes, I know it's a fortune as well as what you do, but it ain't mine."

The listener caught his breath painfully.

"Diamond rings," continued Brother Burge in a suffocating voice. "Stop it, I tell you. No, I won't just go and look at 'em."

A series of groans which the jeweler noticed to his horror got weaker and weaker testified to the greatness of the temptation. He heard Brother Burge rise, and then a succession of panting snarls seemed to indicate a fierce bodily encounter.

"I don't want to look at 'em," said Brother Burge in an exhausted voice. "What's the good of looking at 'em? It's like you, you know diamonds are my weakness. What does it matter if he is asleep? What's my knife got to do with you?"

Brother Higgs reeled back and a mist passed before his eyes. He came to himself at the sound of a door opening, and, impelled by a vague idea of defending his property, snatched up his candle and looked out on to the landing.

The light fell on Brother Burge fully dressed and holding his boots in his hand. For a moment they gazed at each other in silence; then the jeweler found his voice.

"I thought you were ill, brother," he faltered.

An ugly scowl lit up the other's features.

"Don't you tell me any of your lies," he said fiercely. "You're watching me, that's what you're doing. Spying on me."

"I thought that you were being tempted," confessed the trembling Mr. Higgs.

An expression of satisfaction which he strove to suppress appeared on Mr. Burge's face.

"So I was," he said sternly. "So I was; but that's my business. I don't want your assistance. I can fight my own battles. You go to bed; I'm going to tell the congregation I won the fight single handed."

"So you have, brother," said the other eagerly; "but it's doing me good to see it. It's a lesson to me; a lesson to all of us the way you wrestled."

"I thought you was asleep," growled Brother Burge, turning back to his room and speaking over his shoulder. "You get back to bed. The fight ain't half over yet. Get back to bed and keep quiet."

The door closed behind him and Mr. Higgs, still trembling, regained his room and looked in agony at the clock. It was only half past 12 and the sun did not rise until 6. He sat and shivered until a second installment of groans in the next room brought him in desperation to his feet.

Brother Burge was in the toils again, and the jeweler despite his fears could not help realizing what a sensation the story of his temptation would create. Brother Burge was now going round and round his room like an animal in a cage, and sounds as of a soul wrought almost beyond endurance smote upon the listener's quivering ear. Then there was a long silence more alarming even than the noise of the conflict. Had Brother Burge won and was he now sleeping the sleep of the righteous, or—Mr. Higgs shivered and put his other ear to the wall. Then he heard his guest move stealthily across the floor; the boards creaked and the handle of the door turned.

Mr. Higgs started and with a sudden flash of courage born of anger and desperation seized a small brass poker from the fireplace and, taking the candle in his other hand, went out on to the landing again. Brother Burge was closing his door softly, and his face when he turned it upon the jeweler was terrible in its wrath. His small eyes snapped with fury, and his huge hands opened and shut convulsively.

"What, again?" he said in a low growl. "After all I told you!"

Mr. Higgs backed slowly as he advanced.

"No noise," said Mr. Burge in a dreadful whisper. "One scream and I'll—What were you going to do with that poker?"

He took a stealthy step forward.

"I—I," began the jeweler. His voice faltered him. "Burglars," he mouthed, "downstairs."

"What?" said the other, pausing.

Mr. Higgs threw truth to the winds. "I heard them in the shop," he said, recovering. "That's why I took up the poker. Can't you hear them?"

Mr. Burge listened for the fraction of a second. "Nonsense," he said huskily.

"I heard them talking," said the other recklessly. "Let's go down and call the police."

"Call 'em from the window," said Brother Burge, backing with some haste; "they might 'ave pistols or something, and they're ugly customers when they're disturbed."

He stood, with strained face, listening.

"Here they come," whispered the jeweler, with a sudden movement of alarm.

Brother Burge turned and, bolting into his room, clapped the door to and locked it. The jeweler stood dumfounded on the landing; then he heard the window go up and the voice of Brother Burge, much strengthened by the religious exercises of the past six months, bellowing lustily for the police.

For a few seconds Mr. Higgs stood listening and wondering what explanation he should give. Still thinking, he ran downstairs and, throwing open the pantry window, unlocked the door leading into the shop and scattered a few of his cherished possessions about the floor. By the time he had done this people were already beating upon the street door and exchanging hurried remarks with Mr. Burge at the window above. The jeweler shot back the bolts, and half a dozen neighbors, headed by the butcher opposite, clad in his nightgown and armed with a cleaver, burst into the passage. A constable came running up just as the pallid face of Brother Burge peered over the balusters. The constable went upstairs three at a time and, twisting his hand in the ex-burglar's neckcloth, bore him backward.

"I've got one," he shouted. "Come up and hold him while I look around."

The butcher was beside him in a moment. Brother Burge, struggling wildly, called loudly upon the name of Brother Higgs.

"That's all right, constable," said the latter. "That's a friend of mine."

"Friend of yours, sir?" said the disappointed other, still holding him.

The jeweler nodded. "Mr. Samuel Burge, the converted burglar," he said mechanically.

"Conver"—gasped the astonished constable. "Converted burglar? Here?"

"He is a preacher now," added Mr. Higgs.

"Preacher?" retorted the constable. "Why, it's as plain as a pikestaff. Confederates; his part was to go down and let 'em in."

Mr. Burge raised a piteous cry. "I hope you may be forgiven for them words," he cried piously.

"What time did you go up to bed?" pursued the constable.

"About half past 11," replied Mr. Higgs.

The other grunted with satisfaction. "And he's fully dressed, with his boots off?" he remarked. "Did you hear him go out of his room at all?"

"He did go out," said the jeweler truthfully, "but—"

"I thought so," said the constable, turning to his prisoner with affectionate solicitude. "Now you come along o' me. Come quietly, because it'll be the best for you in the end."

"You won't get your skull split open then," added the butcher, toying with his cleaver.

The jeweler hesitated. He had no desire to be left alone with Mr. Burge again, and a sense of humor, which many years' association with the Primitive Apostles had not quite eradicated, strove for hearing.

"Think of the sermon it'll make," he said encouragingly to the frantic Mr. Burge. "Think of the congregation."

Brother Burge replied in language which he had not used in public since he had joined the Apostles. The butcher and another man stood guard over him while the constable searched the premises and made all secure again. Then with a final appeal to Mr. Higgs, who was loitering in the background, he was pitched to the police station by the energetic constable and five zealous assistants.

A diffidence, natural in the circumstances, prevented him from narrating the story of his temptation to the magistrates next morning, and Mr. Higgs was equally reticent. He was put back while the police communicated with London, and in the meantime Brother Clark and a band of Apostles flocked down to his support.

On his second appearance before the magistrates he was confronted with his past, and his past, to the great astonishment of the brethren, being free from all blemish with the solitary exception of fourteen days for stealing milk cans, he was discharged with a caution. The disillusioned Primitive Apostles also gave him his freedom.

Mr. Henry Irving's Genius.

Ellen Terry in her reminiscences of Henry Irving in Mr. Menpes' book on the great actor pictures Irving while rehearsing "The Merchant of Venice."

"I came to the rehearsal with ideas, with my own conception of the part as it ought to be played, but the moment Irving began I was hypnotized. I couldn't budge. I was enthralled."

"He threw himself so thoroughly into it that his skin contracted and his eyes shone. His lips grew whiter and whiter and his skin more and more drawn, as the time went on until he looked like a living thing, but beautiful."

He knew his limitations, Miss Terry declares. "How it awoke it," he once said to her, "that I should have made the reputation I have as an actor with nothing to help me, with no equipment. My legs, my voice—everything has been against me." "And all the time," says Miss Terry, "I was looking at that splendid head and those wonderful hands, which he was holding out in a despairing gesture toward me, and I thought, 'Ah, you little know!'"

FURIOUS ITCHING HUMOR ON CHILD

Bleeding Sores Covered Her Whole Body After an Attack of Measles—Nursed Every Night for Three Weeks—Nothing Helped Her.

THEN CUTICURA MAKES COMPLETE CURE IN 5 DAYS

"It is in my opinion my duty to join those who praise the Cuticura Remedies. After my granddaughter of about seven years had been cured of the measles, she was attacked about a fortnight later by a furious itching and painful eruption all over her body, especially the upper part of it. I found it very watery and bleeding sores, especially under the arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much about Cuticura Remedies. We sent for them and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and, after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Rufenacht, R. F. D. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We then remembered having heard so much