BANK WRECKERS SHOULD BE SENT TO PRISON

Of course no panic will result from the failure of the Oregon Trust company bank in Portland. It was one of those institutions, not conducted along legitimate banking lines, organized to speculate with the savings of poor people. Its failure, sooner or later, was inevitable, and that it came as early in its career was fortunate, because it might in time have enlarged its scope of operations until many more individuals would have been fleeced of their savings when the crash did come. The cashier was a real "high flyer," and the other active officials were more interested in getting quick speculations than in looking after the interests of their depositors, whose savings had been largely gathered up through the distribution of small patent saving banks, scattered over the city by hired canvassers.

The other banks of Portland were right in refusing to help bolster up such an institution as the Oregon Trust company. It was far better for all concerned to stop and take an inventory of assets and make a clean-up and distribution of those that are of value. Some day there ought to be laws in Oregon and every other state of the union, imposing severe penalties upon those who rake and scrape together the savings of the frugal poor for the purpose of investing them in wild-cat speculations.

The only panic that could result from such a failure, if our laws were what they should be, would be confined to the rogues who constitute the boards of directors of these swindling concerns. There is an aching void in the penitentiary for such men that should not long be unoccupied.

SUMMING UP OF RECENT RAILROAD LAWS

In the Review of Reviews for August, Robert Emmett Ireton makes an analysis of the general results of recent railroad legislation which shows that passenger fares were either actually reduced or affected in twenty-one states: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. To-cent rates now prevail in Arkansas, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin; and in Ohio, since 1906; two-and-one-half-cent rates in Alabama and North Carolina. North Carolina has established a two-and-one-quarter-cent rate; West Virginia, a two-cent rate for railroads over fifty miles in length; Iowa, a sliding scale of from two to three cents per mile; Michigan, a two, three and four-cent rate; Kansas, Maryland and Mississippi two-cent rates for mileage books; the railroad commissions of Georgia and South Dakota have been authorized to establish a two-cent and two-and-one-half-cent rate, respectively; and Oklahoma specifies in its new constitution a maximum charge of two cents for passenger fare. Virginia's Corporation Commission has adopted a two-cent rate for trunk roads, a three-cent rate for minor roads, and a three-and-one-half-cent rate on one or to lines. Kansas may adopt a flat two-cent rate on the supposition that what is remunerative in Nebraska should prove equally remunerative in Kansas. Georgia's legislature is still in session and has measures affecting railroads it will enact is yet to be determined.

WHY THE GUARD IS BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM

The outing season is drawing to a close and by September first the big volume of fall business will commence. The Guard, in common with every other business house in the city, is preparing to enter upon an unusually prosperous year. We do not see how anything short of an earthquake or a plague can wrest prosperity from those who make an effort this year, and the Guard is going out after it, and while we are going out after it, we can take you with us.

Nothing succeeds like success. The Guard has made a success of its business, and today stands at the head of journalism in western Oregon. It requires time to establish a newspaper, the same as it requires time to establish any other business. We have by far the best equipped plant in the country, and by far the best news service, and having the evening field, we also have a great advantage over any and all competitors. "Today's news today" is what has developed the evening paper. It enters into the home after the toll of the day is ended and the family, one and all, have time to devour its contents. It is the paper for the home, and Eugene is a city of homes.

The Guard's subscription list covers its field completely, and our solicitors in the country report that for miles at a stretch along the country roads they find the paper in every home. Still there is always some missionary work to be done, especially new comers to be interested, and for this reason we keep the work of canvassing going on all the while. The population of the country is growing rapidly and the Guard's subscription list, daily and weekly, is keeping pace with it. In quantity and quality of circulation the Guard acknowledges no rival in its field, and it offers to the business men of Lane county the most thorough means at their command of reaching the homes of their field. If they would secure their full share of the great volume of business that will be done this fall they will find that honest, legitimate advertising in this paper is read by a vast majority of the people and is the surest method to pursue.

Most people would like to see the telegraph operators better their condition in the matter of wages and hours of labor, but, after all, there is a fear prevalent that a successful strike of such magnitude would lead to a series of walk-outs in other lines, and the industrial world is suffering already from these constant labor disturbances. The public, too, are always the real sufferers in these quarrels between workmen and their employers, as at present almost every line of industry is feeling the effect of the tie-up of the telegraphic service. If the strikers win and wages are raised, telegraph tolls will be elevated by the companies to cover increased expense.

Yesterday W. J. Bryan figured in a train wreck and when it got to the Guard office over the long distance telephone from Portland it read that it was the "first time" he had been a participant in such an accident. It seems, however, that it was really the fourth time he had met with a similar experience in trying to fill lecture dates at Rockford, Ill. This taking telegraphic news over a long distance telephone is no joke, although some of the news items sound humorous after they are printed. The newspapers will welcome the end of the strike with more real enthusiasm than any other branch of business.

Secretary Garfield, believing that employees of the Interior department could be trusted to render honest expense accounts, directed that such accounts need not be sworn to before a notary. Secretary Cortelyou, holding the opposite view, ordered that they should be verified under oath, as heretofore, and his order goes in the disbursing of public money.

Another wonderful medical discovery is announced—a serum that is a sure cure for meningitis. We sincerely trust that it may turn out better than the numerous "sure cures" for other deadly diseases have done.

Shelbyville, Tennessee, was so well pleased with one tune—Mr. T. C.—that it elected him mayor. It is mighty hard for most persons to stand one tune for the length of a mayor's term, but the Shelbyvites may be different.

Mrs. Anson Phelps-Stokes, wife of the millionaire socialist, says love is a matter of the head, not the heart. Maybe so, but the pocket also figures a lot of it, or what goes for it.

Doubtless the delegates to The Hague conference occupied sound-proof quarters while the Morocco cannonading was going on.

Three Jap laborers having been killed in a mix-up with Mexicans, we are expecting to hear that Japan has thrown a big bluff at President Diaz.

With the standpatters the question of revising the tariff stands about where getting religion does with many men—it's got to be done sometimes, but not yet.

KELLY AND HAYWARD ATTRACT MUCH ATTENTION

Speaking of the passing through that city Tuesday morning of Sprinter Dan Kelly and his trainer, the La Grande Observer says:

Trainer and Coach Hayward said today that he was satisfied with Kelly as he was, and had but one fear and that was the lower altitude in which the world's races take place in the Jamestown stadium.

Telephone communications from Baker City say that the "send off" received by the sprinter as his train passed through his home city today was simply enormous. His relatives and friends and followers were out in numbers, and if Kelly fails to come back from the east with the laurels piled on his "Irish" head, it will be no fault of his home city.

The athletic world of the western states look to Kelly to uphold the Pacific coast, and the confident gleam in the trainer's eye and the known ability of the sprinter himself, help to lend a feeling of confidence in the western sporting world.

Hayward is a personage worthy of note and those who know him never fail to become staunch friends. Even during his stay of a few minutes in La Grande this morning, he recognized places and scenes which were familiar with him years ago when he was a boy and used to come to La Grande and play ball. Both are traveling in training style, even while en route.
