Marriage licenses were granted this afternoon to the following: William A. Ayres, aged 21, and Miss Naomi Ham, 21, both of Eugene; Nathan L. Austin, 21, and Miss Bessie L. Shultz, 19, both of Lane county.

The local section hands today built an addition to the passenger depot platform 30 or 40 feet square, to the west of the depot. It was built of Grants Pass decomposed granite, a car load of which arrived yesterday for the purpose.

The Pythian Sisters elected officers as follows, last night: M. E. C. Ella Henderson; Excellent Senior, Samantha Dillard; Excellent Junior, Effie Fisher; Manager of Temple, Lewellyn Hall; M. of R. & C., Edna Gray; Protector of Temple, Hepsy Watts; Guard of Temple, Blanche Willoughby; Past Chief, Nettie Hunter.

The funeral of S. T. McFall was held this forenoon at 10 o'clock at his late residence at the corner of West Eighth and Madison streets. Rev. D. H. Trimble conducted the religious services and the Masous and G. A. R. had charge of the ceremonies at the grave in the I. O. O. F. cemetery. The funeral was largely attended.

A marriage license was issued today to John M. Davidson, aged 28, of Oakland, Ore., and Miss Rhoda King, aged 29, of Cottage Grove.

A public reception will be given tonight at the Commercial club in honor of John H. Hartog, the new promotion manager. All citizens of the city are invited to attend.

At the Congregational church tomorrow evening the subject of the meeting will be, "Life Made Glorious," and Supt. Alderman of the city schools will lead the discussion. Parents are especially invited, and all are cordially welcome.

As the Wendling local as coming to Eugene this forenoon and as it was crossing the McKenzie bridge, a drunken man on the train flourished a revolver above his head and discharged it. The bullet went through the window and striking the iron frame work of the bridge glanced and came back through the window casing into the car. Luckily no one was hurt.

Major C. C. Hammond spent last night in Albany, where he acted as inspector of election held by Co. G of that city for captain. C. B. Winn, formerly commissary officer of the Third Regiment, was chosen as captain. There was much enthusiasm shown over the election of Mr. Winn, and it is thought that the members will hereafter take more interest in the affairs of the company. There was some talk of disbanding the company, but it will remain in existence.

J. M. GLASS LECTURES AT M. E. CHURCH

J. M. Glass gives his lecture, "Christian Citizenship," at the M. E. church tonight. Mr. Glass is a remarkable man, a close student of men, and of history in its making, and could give as good a talk on "Political Economy" or "Finance" as on the subject chosen. Three lectures in Seattle, two Sun-

Beating the Bryans.

"That woman is back again," snapped Mrs. Pauiding. Her son smiled. "That" woman could be none other than Mrs. Bryan, the only person in Glendale who dared challenge Mrs. Pauiding's pretensions to social leadership.

"They got in last night," said Fred mildly. "They had three weeks at the shore, two weeks in the mountains and a month in New York. They brought back a lot of things from there."

"And where did you get all this information?" demanded Mrs. Pauiding in icy tones.

"Nancy," said Fred promptly. "I met her down at the postoffice and walked part of the way home with her."

"I wish you would remember that I do not like to have you speak to that loud person," said Mrs. Pauiding fretfully. "Mrs. Beeman had the audacity to ask at the sewing circle the other afternoon if you were engaged to Nancy."

"There doesn't seem to be a chance for such luck," said Fred gloomily as he rose from the table. "Every time I ask her she reminds me how our respective mothers-in-law would love us."

"Every time?" echoed his astonished mother. "May I ask how many times you have lowered your dignity by proposing to that impudent girl?"

"About a hundred," was the easy response. "One of these days I'll catch her off her guard and she'll say 'Yes.'"

"I hope I may never live to see the day," said his mother dolefully.

"I hope you do," he said, with a laugh, as he bent and kissed the tightly compressed lips. "You'd like her, mummy, if you didn't hate her mother so."

Fred slipped out of the room, and his mother could hear the rumble of his laughter as he crossed the broad hall.

For a time she sat with compressed lips as she pondered the situation. Until two years before she had queneed it over the Glendale set both by virtue of her husband's business and political importance and because of her own skill as an entertainer. Then the new pulp mill had been started at the upper dam, and Renfew Bryan had brought his family to live in Glendale.

From the first the two women had crossed swords. Mrs. Bryan, who had humbly followed other leaders in the city, now asserted her right to the title in the small town, and by the brilliancy of her entertainments she had very nearly wrested social supremacy from her established rival before Mrs. Pauiding had realized what was going on.

Her own entertainments became more ambitious, and for the last year the advantage had lain first with one and then the other. To have Fred fall a victim to Nancy Bryan was the worst blow she had sustained, and had she known that Nancy's mother was as furious as she at the turn affairs had taken she would have derived small comfort from that fact. In blissful ignorance of Mrs. Bryan's state of mind, she elected to believe it a move of that designing woman.

To add to the discomfort of the situation, she heard during the day that Mrs. Bryan was to celebrate her return by a garden party of unusual pretentiousness.

A number of her city friends were to make up a house party, and there was to be dancing on the lawn to the music of an orchestra famous throughout the state.

some new feature was added as an offset until it seemed that nothing short of the engagement of a circus could definitely settle the honors.

It was in this frame of mind that Mrs. Pauiding approached her son. "You know that automobile you wanted," she began at the breakfast table. "I'll get it for you if you can devise some feature that Mrs. Bryan cannot possibly get for her party. That woman has copied every idea I have originated so far."

"Do you give me carte blanche?" he demanded.

"Spend as much as you like," she murmured.

"And you won't ask what it is until I spring it?" he stipulated.

"I promise," she said. "I may rely upon you, Fred?"

"For the sensation of the season," he assured, "take heart of grace, mother mine. I am planning to shake Glendale to its very foundations."

Much relieved, Mrs. Pauiding hurried to confide to her dearest friends that she would have a sensation that could not be equaled. This in due course was communicated to Mrs. Bryan, who worried much; but since Mrs. Pauiding did not herself know the nature of the surprise, she could not betray Fred's plans.

The day of the "double header," as Pauiding irreverently referred to it, dawned bright and beautiful, and by 2 o'clock the festivities were under way. There were circus performances on both lawns, and honors seemed fairly even. Mrs. Pauiding went about with a smile of confidence upon her face and with skillful references to her surprise kept curiosity up to pitch. The afternoon passed without the appearance of the surprise, and the dusk had gathered before Fred disappeared, and word was passed that he had gone to engineer the great event. An hour later the Pauiding butler sought his mistress, and she vanished into the house.

She found Fred in the library, and with him was Nancy Bryan.

"I want to introduce you to the sensation," said Fred, with a laugh, as he led the girl forward. "Nancy and I were married half an hour ago."

"And this is your surprise?" she gasped.

"Could you have a greater one?" he asked. "Every one knows of the rivalry between you and Mrs. Bryan. If you turn your party into a wedding reception you'll beat Mrs. Bryan to a standstill. You've been bragging about your surprise. You pretend you knew it was coming all along, and the laugh is on Mrs. Bryan."

For a moment Mrs. Pauiding hesitated. In some ways it was a bitter pill to swallow; but, as Fred had shown her, it was necessary to make the best of the situation. She stepped forward and took the bright faced girl in her arms.

"My dear," she said sincerely, "I am very glad to welcome my son's wife to her new home. Let us go out on the lawn. I will introduce you to my friends."

She turned toward the door, but paused as down the street there came the sound of a marching band.

"What is that," she asked—"more of the surprise?"

Pauiding nodded his head. "It's the people from the Bryans coming to congratulate the bride!" he exclaimed. "Mr. Bryan was with us, but went home to tell his wife and invite the crowd over here. You have swallowed up Mrs. Bryan's party with your counter attractions. I guess I've kept my promise, haven't I?"

If you are not a depositor in our bank
We can make it worth your while to do business with us, and we want you to come in and find out why.
Your interests are our interests.
Our success is in the prosperity of this community, and the prosperity of the community is in individual thrift.
There is nothing that offers such a two-fold opportunity to the individual as a bank account.
The money you save and deposit in the bank is yours—it is at your command at any time to better your condition, to start you in business, to build a home, to invest profitably—a hundred and one things that systematic saving puts within the reach of any person.
At the same time that money is going into circulation through the medium of the bank—it is being used right here at home and is making for the prosperity of the community.
We offer our depositors every service and convenience in transacting business.
We also provide them an absolutely safe depository for their money.
Fifteen years' experience in successful banking, in which the accumulated surplus and undivided profits fund now amounts to one-third more than the capital stock, proves the value of the safe and conservative policy that we have pursued.
If you have idle money awaiting investment we will be pleased to give you the benefit of our experience and advice.
