

NEW FINANCIAL BILL MADE PUBLIC BY SENATE MEMBERS

Washington, Jan. 7.—The financial bill, which has been in preparation for some time by the senate committee on finance, was printed today and given to the public. The bill provides for an additional issue of bank circulation which shall at no time exceed $250,000,000 on bonds other than those issued by the government, including state and municipal bonds, in approved cases. The comptroller of the currency is given discretion in the issuance of the proposed currency, and he is authorized to decide as to the time and amount to be awarded to any banking institution. It is provided that the increased circulation shall in no case exceed 75 per cent of the value of the bonds deposited.

JAPS ARRIVE AT VANCOUVER IN HORDES.
Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 4.—The unexpected arrival of 300 Japanese in Vancouver yesterday and the prospect of an influx of another 1200 within the next month from Honolulu are the features of the Oriental situation in Vancouver. Why the 300 Japanese came to Vancouver is a mystery. All morning they poured into town from the coast logging camps, and some even came from the other side of the boundary line. The boarding house keeper of Jap town had a busy time housing them. There is the usual crop of rumors that they came in view of possible trouble, and the officers of the Asiatic Exclusion League are much perturbed over the event. Today it was announced that at least 1000 Japs would come from Hawaii during the next three weeks.

The old wooden building where Mrs. Patterson's brick is to be built on East Ninth street has been entirely removed. Work of erecting the new building will begin in a short time.

OCEAN LINER ARRIVES IN PORT LONG OVERDUE

Queenstown, Jan. 7.—The long overdue Canadian Pacific steamer Mount Royal steamed slowly into Queenstown harbor today. News of her arrival was received with gladness in shipping circles. Shortly after leaving the British coast for Canadian ports she encountered a series of storms, but battled bravely for two weeks until some trouble with her boilers developed, when it was determined to make for the Irish coast. She refused assistance from a tug. All her 400 passengers are reported well.

SILVER MARKET MAKE BIG JUMP

London, Jan. 7.—Silver jumped a penny and one-eighth today as the result of the covering of a large bear sale made some time ago, which fell due today. Demands from India and China also helped raise the price. The market is unsettled.

SECURING JURY TO TRY THAW

New York, Jan. 7.—Two of the jurors previously accepted for the trial of Harry Thaw were excused by consent of both sides today. When court adjourned after recess at 1 o'clock nine jurors were in the box and the work of securing a jury was progressing slowly. The first panel of one hundred talemans has been exhausted and one more, which reported this morning, has been heavily drawn upon.

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY RESIGNS

Portland, Jan. 7.—James Cole, assistant United States attorney, has resigned. Monmouth is to have a creamery, a condenser and a tile factory, and from the way that the houses are being filled it seems that the population is also going to keep pace with the rapid industrial growth that is promised.

MONUMENT UNVEILED TO MEMORY OF VICTIMS OF BENNINGTON HORROR WITH IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES

REAR ADMIRAL GOODRICH.

San Diego, Jan. 7.—In the presence of thousands, including the officers and sailors of the Pacific squadron and citizens of San Diego and other California cities, who had gathered to witness the ceremony, the memorial monument to the Bennington dead was unveiled this afternoon at the national cemetery on top of Point Loma. Large squads of marines from the warships in the harbor joined with the local militia, the naval reserve and two companies of soldiers from Fort Rosecrans, acted as escort to the cemetery, and hundreds of sailors attended without being assigned to the escort. Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, bishop of the southern diocese of the Episcopal church of California, invoked the divine blessing and the music was supplied by the choir of St. Paul's Episcopal church. The principal address was made by Rear Admiral Goodrich, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, who was commander of the Pacific squadron at the time of the accident to the Bennington. He reviewed the history of the monument and what it commemorated. He said in part: "It is not my intention to narrate the many noble cases of self sacrifice which illuminate the sad and dark annals of that dreary day. They have passed into history, to form a splendid chapter of which all Americans may well be proud. Out of the steam and clouds of the lower deck several found their way to safety through the presence of mind of one who, raising his voice above the din, called: 'This is the way; follow me.' Men with scalded and blackened faces, the flesh dropping from their bones, endeavored to save their shipmates in still worse case. Some poor sufferers, crazed by their pain, sought relief by throwing themselves in the sea. The instances of men returning again and again at the risk of their lives to rescue their wounded shipmates from the steam filled and perilous spaces below decks are numerous enough to freshen our faith in mankind and to assure us that the American man-of-warman of today worthily maintains the traditions of a glorious past. What more can be said of the fortitude of any man than this: 'Ferguson refused aid and clambered into the ambulances himself, leaving large pieces of his skin on the deck.' Alas, it is only his memory which we can now honor, for the man himself shortly afterward crossed the great divide into that land where si and suffering may not enter."

"Nothing we can do will add to their fame. Yet, knowing this full well, we, their comrades, here declare that, so far as our poor efforts can accomplish it, the lesson of their great sacrifice shall not be lost to their native land. In this spirit we dedicate this monument to their memory in token of our own affection and the reverence in which the navy holds its illustrious dead. "Brothers, you have but gone before us into eternal rest, through the wide portal of suffering and pain, but you have left us, who linger, the lamp of your example to shine as long as the navy of the United States shall exist, cherishing its living and revering those who fell at their post. From this sacred spot the youth of our broad country who enter its service will draw fresh inspiration. Living they will be loved and helped along their way; and when the last summons shall come, finer tribute they cannot receive than that they met their fate as bravely, as loyally and as unregretfully as did the dead of the United States ship Bennington.

"The finished obelisk stands here today. It makes no pretense to elaboration of design or of ornamentation, for it commemorates the heroism of simple men whose guiding motive was devotion to their duty. To all it teaches a lesson that he who enters the service of his country does so unreservedly, in fact as well as in words. At any moment and in any manner he may be called upon to fulfill that obligation to the letter. His life is one of perils and privations. Long years are devoted by him to the preparation for one brief hour, upon whose issue may hang the very existence of the nation. The annals of our service but too dolorously proclaim that the preparation has exacted and continues to exact its appalling tribute of human life. Yet some must perish that the nation may survive.

"The end of those who repose here was not less exalting in its patriotism than is the end of those who fall in battle. In some respects it seems to be on a still more exalted plane. To them were denied the laurels of the victor and the shouts of an ap-

VESSELS COLLIDE OFF COLUMBIA, ONE LIFE LOST

Victoria, Jan. 7.—The British ship Port Patrick was in collision last Friday with a lightship off the Columbia River, and was almost totally wrecked and the expensive sea-weed work was done when the ship dove heavily into the breakers and came on an outlying rock off the Washington coast near Gray's Harbor the following morning. The Port Patrick was towed here this morning for repairs. The cargo had shifted and she was badly listed and in a shocking condition off Cape Flattery when picked up by the tug Sea Lion.
