

DOES "FINANCIAL STRINGENCY" HURT POULTRY BUSINESS

Who said "hard times"? Who said "panic"? exclaims J. F. Schureman in Commercial Poultry. Who is it that has even dared to insinuate that there is a stringency in the money market? Who is it that has had the audacity to predict that the country is going to the demeriton bow-wow? Certainly, not if he is in his right mind and has given the matter any thought whatever. Hard times? No, not for the poultryman, at least. Men and women in other lines of business may feel the effect of the little financial flurry that has swept over the country, but not the poultry breeder. Present financial conditions signify anything but hard times for the poultrymen of the country, and we will tell you why.

In the first place men and women who have small savings bank accounts, hoarded up from their weekly earnings, are the first ones to get fidgety and nervous at a time like this, and as soon as the banking rules permit of it they withdraw their money and put in socks or under the corner of the carpet or some other place where they think it will be secure. Before long, however, they begin to get nervous for fear that they will be robbed or lose their money in some other way, and then what is the most natural thing for them to do? Why, look around for some safe place to invest it, of course, where it will not only be safe, but pay a profit.

They are not looking for big things for they have only a small amount to invest, and there are not many opportunities for small investments unless a number pool their capital and tackle something bigger. Do you appreciate what we are trying to get at? Is your thought factory in working order? If it is, we need not say another word, for you will readily comprehend that instead of there being hard times in store for the poultryman who has stock for sale it behooves him to get busy at once, as his harvest season is at hand. It's a dead sure thing that many of these people who are looking for something in which to invest will take up the breeding of poultry and will be looking for stock.

During the past few years the people of this country have been educated along the line of the possibilities of intelligent poultry culture as never before. The industry has achieved so important a position in the industrial and commercial welfare of our nation that the leading magazines, as well as the metropolitan daily and weekly papers, have given much of their space to an exploitation of the industry of its possibilities, and today there are undoubtedly thousands of people in this country who, on account of the stagnation along other industrial lines, will take up poultry breeding as a safe and profitable business in which to invest a little money.

And it is safe and, if profitably conducted, profitable. No financial panic can ever affect the poultry industry of this country to any appreciable extent. In spite of the present financial depression, when many other industries are crippled, and in some cases practically dead, there is a cry going up the country over for fresh eggs and choice poultry, and the producer of these commodities can dispose of his product at almost his own price. Hard times? We should say not—not for the poultryman.

Then again, many people who have never heretofore kept a chicken will now keep a few to supply their own household needs. The first thing a man does when his monthly or weekly income is reduced by reason of a reduction in the working hours at the factory or mill where he is employed is to try to devise some means of reducing his living expenses, and it is a well known fact that eggs can be produced for about one-third of their cost in the market, and sometimes less, so it will occur to him that one way of reducing the living expenses of his family will be to get a small flock of fowls to supply the eggs for his household. He knows—unless he is away behind the times, and these fellows are scarce nowadays—that pure-bred fowls will lay twice as many eggs as mongrels, and as it is eggs he is after, he is naturally going to buy pure birds.

We said above that the poultryman's harvest season is at hand and we believe it. If snaggle-tooth Despair has been stalking around in your back yard, trying to make you think that everything is going to the dogs, open the gate and tell him it is his move. Should some pessimistic fellow try to discourage you with lurid tales of hard times, tell him to go to that mysterious bourne where no return tickets are obtainable. Keep your mind's eye on the fact that you are engaged in an industry that is not affected by financial furies, panics or anything of the kind, and put forth your best efforts to get the business that is sure to result from the present stringency in financial circles—business for poultrymen.

Now just a word more and our discourse is ended. The people referred to above as about to go into the poultry business are going to buy stock from the breeders who advertise. In the language of the street gamin, "that's a cinch." How else would they know there was any stock to be had? Consequently, instead of cutting down his advertising appropriation at this time, the poultryman who is wise will increase it and use larger space in order that he may tell something of the good qualities of his stock, their egg-laying proclivities, etc. The poultryman who allows himself to become scared at this time and allows the safety-valve of his heart to become clogged up, and cut down his advertising appropriation, is making the greatest mistake of his life. Opportunity is knocking at the door of the poultryman. The harvest is ripe and ready to be garnered. Get busy.

MARY RODNEY MEMORIAL HALL AT UNIVERSITY

The Portland Journal speaks of the proposed new Mary Rodney Memorial hall as follows:

A movement that will meet with the interested support not only of Episcopalians but with many who are interested in higher education, has been set on foot by Bishop Scadding and Professor Luella Clay Carson, of the University of Oregon. An effort will be made to erect at the State University at Eugene a memorial hall to Miss Mary B. Rodney to be used as a residence for young women attending the University.

A meeting has been called by Bishop Scadding of the Oregon diocese to be held in the parish hall of St. Stephens Pro-cathedral, corner of Thirtieth and Clay streets, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Carson, who is head of the English department and also dean of women at the University, will be present and will state the need. All women interested in the movement, whether Episcopalians or not, are invited to attend.

Miss Rodney was one of the first and foremost educators of Oregon for many years and was, for a long time at the head of St. Helen's hall. She was a sister-in-law of the late Bishop B. Wistar Morris, and was an earnest worker in the cause of higher education. It is especially fitting that a memorial to her should be erected at the leading educational institution of the state, and it will be the first memorial dedicated to this pioneer educator. A large attendance is expected at the meeting.

ASHLAND WILL NOT GET ANOTHER TRAIN

Balem, Or., Jan. 15.—The railroad commissioner made order yesterday discontinuing the investigation of the complaint against the services of the Southern Pacific passenger trains 11 and 12, operating between Roseburg and Portland, with a view to ordering an extension to the train service further south to Ashland. This action is taken because the people south of Roseburg, upon whose petition the complaint was made, and for whom hearing was had at Ashland several weeks ago, failed to produce sufficient evidence in the opinion of the commissioner, to warrant an extension of the train service farther south than Roseburg. This order practically disposes of the case altogether.

WANTS BODY MADE INTO SOUVENIRS

New York Jan. 14.—Praising himself on his ideas of utilitarianism, Henry E. Sullivan has made a will by which he directs the executors to make use after his death of every portion of his body for which use can be found. His bones are to be made into buttons, his skin is to be tanned for leather trinkets, and violin strings are to be made of such portions of his body as lend themselves to that use. All of these products, Mr. Sullivan directs, are to be given to his particular friend, James Hayes, who is to distribute the articles among Sullivan's friends, as he sees fit.

IDAHO'S OUTPUT OF COPPER DURING 1907.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The production of blister copper from Idaho in 1907 was 8,578,046 pounds, a gain of about 1,300,000 pounds over the output of 1906. The mine production amounts to 9,558,913 pounds. The difference between the mine and the smelter production in 1906 is due to the fact that a very large quantity of Idaho ore was held in storage at Canadian and Pacific Coast smelter works at the end of the year. Much of the product came from the Snowdrift mine, in the Coeur d'Alene district, and from the White Knob mine, at Mackay, Custer County.

MARTIN'S POWER

IS VERY INTENSE

Before a great audience last evening Dr. Martin, the Christian evangelist, delivered one of his most impressive sermons thus far. He possesses rare ability in the art of holding the close attention of every one during his discourse. No one can listen to him five minutes without being impressed with the fact that words of vital meaning and from a vital source have been expressed by him.

No matter, friend, whether your tastes are of a humorous, pathetic or of a middle state, you will most certainly not go away disappointed when you hear Dr. Martin. By all means come tonight. He will preach on a subject which he is by no means ashamed or afraid to discuss, a subject of great importance in the eyes of the world and of greater importance in the sight of God. His theme will be "Why I Belong to the Christian Church."

Since the services begin at 7:50 you should come earlier than that if you hope to have a comfortable seat.

EUGENE PROPERTY WILL GROW VALUABLE

Blair street addition property is sure to double in value within the next two years. As sure as water runs down hill, Eugene must build down the valley--because the business is there.

There are both acreage tracts and large lots in this addition, only a mile from the business center and three blocks from the Geary public school.

Prices are very reasonable and you may make your own terms, a small payment down and monthly installments if you desire. See the Oregon Land Co. at 412 Willamette street, or write them for particulars and prices.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Eaton died last night at the residence of his granddaughter, Mrs. G. W. Wilson, 28 East 29th St. Death was due to disabilities of old age. His remains were taken to Creswell, Lane county, this afternoon for interment in the family plot.

Mr. Eaton was born in Tennessee in 1833, and came across the plains to Oregon in 1852, in company with his wife, who had been Miss Fannie Canton, daughter of a prominent Missouri family. The trip was made down the middle fork of the Willamette river, for the first time in its history, the team being compelled to cross the river 21 times.

When the couple reached the Willamette valley they settled on a donation land claim near what is now Creswell, in Lane county. When the Rogue river Indians became troublesome and were massacring white families, Mr. Eaton enlisted in the cause of the whites under General Olney and assisted materially in bringing the savages to terms and finally landing the remnant of the hostile tribes on the Siletz reservation.

While making a home in the Willamette valley Mr. Eaton was a great friend of the Indians, and his home was known by them as one of hospitality, which proved of great value in keeping the aborigines of that part of Oregon territory friendly disposed toward the white settlers. He used to keep a pack of fox hounds to hunt bear and deer, and his prowess as a huntsman was regarded with awe by his savage friends.

Mr. Eaton's wife died several years ago. He leaves three daughters--Mrs. G. W. Wilson of Portland; Mrs. J. C. Wilson of Deshan; and Mrs. Frazier J. Kelsay of Fossil. In this state. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and his obsequies will be conducted by that order--Portland Telegram.
