AN EDITOR HESITATES TO SERVE THE PUBLIC

Of course we are now all very sorry that the direct primary law was enacted. None of us for a moment thought of the dire consequences of the act when we voted for a law that would enable the people to choose public officials without the assistance of a political machine.

We had no idea that it might deprive the country of the brilliant services of the editor of the Register, who is now resolutely refusing the importunities of his friends that he become a candidate for the legislature. He is closing his ears to the pleadings of the rank and file of his party who believe his peerless ability in the halls of legislation essential to the salvation of the country at this critical period of its career, because he cannot subscribe to the infamous direct primary law, which so brazenly disregards the time-honored right of the politicians as to ask a candidate to pledge himself, through statement No. 1, to vote for a United States senator who is the choice of a majority of the voters, instead of the party machine or the corporations, if not both. Thus have the fool people, as Tom Lawson characterizes them, in their anxiety to run the government in their own interests awhile, placed on the statute books a law that may force the erudite editor of the morning paper to refrain from immolating himself on the altar of public duty because of deep-seated conscientious scruples. He cannot, as a partisan of the old school, lend his aid to or countenance this brazen assumption of the right of the "plain people" to govern themselves; it is little short of an outrage upon the self-sacrificing politician, although it has been justified by some of the old fogies like Abe Lincoln, who had exaggerated or abnormal notions regarding such obsolete courses as popular rights.

Of course the editor of the Register has advocated the election of senators by the direct vote of the people in season and out of season for years, and has subscribed to all his party's platforms that pledged the organization to that principle, but this should not now be held seriously against him. Such a thing is an impracticability because it requires a federal constitutional amendment, and there is no prospect of securing this for another century or two, so that it was a perfectly sane thing for the politician to advocate. It satisfied the people of their good intentions—and meant nothing. Statement No. 1, which brings about practically a popular election of senators, was not the work of the party managers, but rather an innovation engineered by the people themselves through the initiative law of Oregon, and can only be regarded as a usurpation of the prerogatives of their self-constituted bosses, who are exceeding wroth to think the "worm has turned" and is actually bawling things himself.

But this is not a time to moralize or theorize upon the rights of the citizen. It is an alarming condition that confronts the state of Oregon at this time. Editor Gilstrap because to take up the burden of ruling over the dear people, because he is afraid he may be required to do some things that his constituents, in the inferior judgment, may wish him to do. Under the provisions of this wicked, vicious and altogether presumptuous law he may even be compelled to respect their wishes, quite to the extent of voting for a United States senator of their choice. The situation is absolutely appalling and will allow of no palliation or extenuation. The power of the people must be restrained, and Gilstrap must be sent to Salem to make such laws as in his superior judgment he deems to be proper for their government. The direct primary law is a hodge and must be relegated to the shades of oblivion.

PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

President Roosevelt sent to congress today a message dealing with labor problems and corporation questions. He makes a strong plea for a constitutional employers' liability law, as well as a modification of the power of injunction in labor troubles. He also reiterates his position on questions affecting the control of public service corporations, advocating certain modifications of the Sherman anti-trust laws as applied to railroad combinations.

The message is one of the strongest and clearest ever written by the president and is worthy of perusal by all readers of the Guard today.

"In God We Trust" will soon again be inscribed on the gold coin of the realm. President Roosevelt, it is understood, will yield in the matter. Representative Wood of New Jersey, to whom the controversy between the artistic friends of the president and the patriotic and religious people was intrusted for solution, offers what is believed to be the bill that will save congressional action. It provides simply that "In God We Trust" shall go back on the gold coin and that the change be made within thirty days after the passage of the act.

After all, a great many good newspapers are inconsistent and unreasonable at times. Here is the Portland Telegram demanding that the unemployed workmen of the city be put to work on the streets, regardless of civil service rules or qualifications. And not so many months ago the same paper was criticizing and denouncing the mayor and other city officials for the lax enforcement of civil service requirements. It's pretty hard to please some newspapers, to say the least.

A French woman who makes a specialty of male corsets, and claims King Edward for a customer, is over here, presumably looking for business. For all we know, she may have come to measure one of the "Big Bills"—Taft or Bryan; the figures of either might be improved by corsets. It's certain she'll get no patronage from either Fairbanks or Cannon, unless she also handles pads.

Talk about quick action. Prohibition isn't a month old in Atlanta, yet one of its advocates is out with the claim that its residents already see better than ever before. However, let us be just. Perhaps he means they see cabalistic signs indicating where booze may be had by the initiated.

Well, suppose the president should discipline the naval officers who have been openly criticizing the navy? It wouldn't be any more than any private manager would do to employees caught "knocking" his business, would it? The first duty of a subordinate is to keep his mouth shut.

Seems like turning back to the campaign of 1876 to read a proclamation signed by William S. Chandler and William Pitt Kellogg, urging the negroes of the south to send un-instructed delegates to the Chicago convention.

Another court—the Pennsylvania supreme—has taken a swat at a 2-cent railroad fare state law, using the constitution as a club; and at that it was only an affirmation of the decision of a Philadelphia court.

A gang of the meanest thieves on earth have been working the Brooklyn churches—they dropped counterfeit half dollars in the contribution baskets, asked for and got good quarters in change.
