DR. MARTIN PREACHES

ON "THE OLD PATHS"

FIVE PERSONS WENT FORWARD AT CONCLUSION OF LAST NIGHT'S SERVICES—BUSY DAY TOMORROW

Beyond question a sermon has never before been given that was more clear cut and true to the Scriptures than the one Dr. Martin gave last night to a large audience at the Christian church.

With illustrations most suitable he preached the Word as one having authority, and yet it was not he but Christ who spoke to us the message of everlasting truth. He most assuredly is a strong advocate of the old Jerusalem gospel, and unmistakably sends the arrow of truth into the conscience of every fair-minded person.

When the children of Israel murmured in the wilderness they did not murmur against Moses, but against God. Some may dislike Dr. Martin because of what he preaches, but such as may do so should bear in mind that they are not in reality casting reproach upon him, but instead they are disdaining God and the teachings of Christ.

When the gospel invitation was given five persons took their stand in the way of life, thereby raising the total of accessions to 123.

Tonight is your opportunity to hear Dr. Martin preach a great sermon on "Wisdom in Small Things." If possible come earlier than 7:30.

In the morning at 9:45 the great Bible school will meet. Come and

BURGLAR SURPRISED AT HIS WORK

JESSE INMAN AND WIFE FIND MAN PILFERING IN THEIR HOUSE BUT HE ESCAPES, LEAVING HAT BEHIND

A bold bad burglar entered the residence of Jesse Inman on Olive street last night and stole Mrs. Inman's purse, containing $1.95 in coin and Mr. Inman's razor and cigar case.

Mr. and Mrs. Inman were at the Fountain Grocery, which has been sold to A. M. Daniels, during the evening, and returned home about 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Inman inserted the key in the lock of the front door to unlock it, but found that it had already been unlocked. They then entered the house and heard some one running. The marauder ran against the sewing machine in the dining room, knocking it across the room, and then ran out the back door. In going through the back yard he ran against a clothesline, where his hat was knocked off. He did not take the time to pick it up, and the officers now have the lid awaiting its owner. It is a black hat with a broad brim and crushed to a peak. There are no marks on it that would lead to the identity of the burglar.

After the burglar had fled Mr. and Mrs. Inman took an inventory of their belongings and the articles mentioned were the only things missed. A revolver lay on the dresser in the bedroom where the thief left a burning lamp, but it was not taken. He went through all the drawers in the dressers and chiffoniers, but took nothing from them as far as can be learned.

The Christian Endeavor meets at 8:15 p. m. At 7:30 p. m. Dr. Martin will deliver the sermon on "Popular Amusements." This sermon has always been listened to by great audiences and from all indications it will be met with the same tomorrow night.

Excellent singing at each service under the efficient leadership of Professor Davis. Everybody welcome.

EXPERIENCE OF UTAH POULTRYMAN

E. P. Snelton, a chicken raiser of Cache county, Utah, relates his poultry experience in the following article:

I have been repeatedly asked, does poultry pay when you are obliged to buy the necessary supplies for egg production, such as beef scraps, oyster shells, varieties of grain etc?

The following figures are taken from an accurate account of outlay and income.

January, 1907	27.00
February, 1907	37.57
March, 1907	27.50
April, 1907	25.00
May, 1907	25.00
June, 1907	28.50
July, 1907	42.10
August, 1907	54.40
September, 1907	60.89
October, 1907	19.40
November, 1907	37.15
Total	$423.58
Expenses as follows:
Feed	$121.90
Oyster Shells	5.35
Beef Scraps	11.65
Express	37.48
Five gals. Lee's Lice Killer	4.00
Kerosene	1.00
Lime	2.00
Truss Dip	2.00
Two quarts crystal carbolic	1.00
Egg cases	20.00
Total	$205.23

Leaving a profit of $218.35.

Our eggs and poultry were sold in Salt Lake to a reliable cafe.

At the beginning of December, 1906, we had 150 hens. They were placed in five pens. One coop is ten feet wide, forty feet long, four feet high at the back and seven in front. This is made of double lumber all throughout, with a paper between; also paper between the sheathing and shingles. It faces south with four six-light windows, 12x14, with an opening of the same size covered with single burrap for ventilation. This coop is divided into two pens, ten feet square.

In pen No. 1, were twenty-four hens and a cockerel, pure bred White Wyandottes.

In pen No. 2 were twenty-five half bred Wyandottes; in pen No. 3, twenty-five half bred White Leghorns; in pen No. 4, twenty-four pure-bred single combed White Leghorns and cockerel.

The fifty remaining hens were mongrels, kept in a similarly constructed coop 10x20. These coops had a run attached to pen and chickens had the range of the orchard in summer and mild weather.

The Wyandottes laid fairly well during the winter; the half-bred Wyandottes paid for their feed; the half-bred Leghorns paid once and a half their feed, while the pure bred White Leghorns brought the profit. The mongrels, cared for just the same, and in as good a coop, laid an average of four eggs a day. We kept daily account of eggs laid in each pen.

When spring came, for a few months the mongrels laid as well as the pure bred, but as the hot weather came on the egg yield from them seriously declined, while the pure-breds kept the egg basket supplied until the nesting season came.

Now in reference to feeding. At night we feed a mixture of whole grains or equal parts of corn, wheat and barley, more than they can consume, so that when they come off the roost in the morning they will have something to scratch for among the straw. About nine o'clock they are fed oats in troughs; at 1 o'clock two parts cracked wheat and one part beef scraps and one part cracked corn fed dry. We do not feed corn in summer time. We keep oyster shells and charcoal in tin hoppers before the mall the time with plenty of fresh water and clabber milk if possible. Nothing will equal the milk for egg production.

We aim to keep the coops in as perfect sanitary condition as possible using dropping boards, which are cleaned twice a week. Every two weeks a disinfectant is used—Lee's Lice Killer, kerosene, Kross dip, carbolic acid, and quantities of air-laked lime, and frequently a coat of whitewash. We send to Kansas City for oyster shells, beef scraps and charcoal.

"BASAL BOOST FOR EUGENE" BY MR. TRIMBLE

Under the above general head the Rev. D. H. Trimble will give a series of four Sunday evening addresses at the M. E. church. The subject for next Sunday night at 7:30 is: February 2—"Type of Young Men We Need."

February 9—"Type of Young Woman We Need."

February 16—"Type of Fathers We Need."

February 23—"Type of Mothers We Need."

These will cover an exceedingly interesting field, and each will be enjoyed not only by the class addressed but by the other three classes. Let young men, young women, fathers, mothers, hear the whole series beginning next Sunday night.

THE TOP ROUND OF THE LADDER.

Camilla Deming was a country girl who went to the city to join in the literary scramble. Ambitious and possessing some means, she intended to eschew the drudgery of editorial work and strike at once into authorship. But one man in her native village was sufficiently intellectual to secure her friendship, Curtis Forster, a young physician who had studied his profession in town and returned to practice it in the country. He was plodding and practical. He strongly advised her to choose a role offering greater chances of success, that of wife and mother, with himself for the husband, and when she refused begged her if she were unsuccessful to consider the offer still open.

She had met with some success by writing stories for the country papers and began in her new field with others more finished. It is true, but the same simple work that had so pleased her neighbors. Occasionally she would dispose of one of them to a magazine, but at the end of a year after figuring up her net proceeds she had gained but a twentieth of her expenditures.

She had brought with her from the country a bit of editorial work, which had remained in the bottom of her trunk. Feeling that she should make an effort to add something to her income for the next year even if it were not by her chosen creative work, she took out this manuscript, smoothed the rumpled pages and looked it over. It consisted of a series of selections from the most affecting scenes in the works of Washington Irving to each of which she had written a brief introduction, admirably imitating the author's style.

It was accepted, and the book made a hit. The author's income for the year from this source was equal to her expenditures. Her publisher suggested the writing of another similar book made up of extracts from the humor of a noted author.

The publisher's suggestion was accompanied by so handsome an offer that she accepted. The second book was more popular than the first and the proceeds derived many times larger. Then commenced a scramble among publishers for the works of Camilla Deming. Success is gratifying in any form, and the young author was very much delighted with hers. She did not now consider her work simply editorial. At any rate, she saw in it an opening for her own creations.

She had long had on hand a novel which from time to time she had submitted to publishers, then revised and submitted again, always with the same result—"Unavailable." Selecting one of a dozen publishers who were now bounding her for her work, she placed it in his hands, and it was published immediately.

About this time she received a note from Dr. Forster congratulating her on her progress. She replied in a vein of exhilaration, giving with charming naïvete the remark of her last publisher, "You will soon be at the top of the ladder if you don't marry." Forster replied, "Marry and turn the ladder upside down."

The novel was a success. Though not as successful as the two previous books, still it sold well. Camilla waited before entering upon any new work till this fact had been established, then went to her publisher for a conference. He told her that there was a demand for a work like her previous ones and suggested that she take up Thackeray and extract scenes as she had done with Irving.

Somehow the advice fell on Camilla like a wet blanket. She was at a turning point in her career. What should she do? She felt the need of some one to whom she had confidence to assist her in seeing the problem in its true light. Packing her belongings, she took a train for home. Arriving there, she sent for Dr. Forster, stated her case and asked his advice. He took a copy of each of her three books and promised to see her when he had carefully read them. In a few days he called upon her with his report, which she well knew would be the plain, unvarnished truth:

"The sale of your first two books was based on the genius of another. Publishers, in order to secure that which they were sure of selling, so flattered you that they partly convinced you that your success was largely due to your own effort. Your novel is pleasing, but not a work of genius."

Camilla drew a long sigh—the sigh of one bitterly disappointed.

"Camilla," the doctor went on, "what is this you lament—that you are not pre-eminent in creating imaginary beings who are intended to move before us like real people, exact their triumphs and weep at their failures? It is a noble field, I admit, a field in which there have been but few real masters, but there is a nobler one. In it the characters are real and come from the great Creator. It is a field into which I would myself gladly enter if you would consent to enter it with me. If you will abandon the fictitious and take up the real, your characters will be a husband who adores you and children whose being is not the fanciful emanation of your brain, but a part of yourself. The scene of your romance will be a real home; the hopes, fears, success, failures of your story those of an actual united family."

Before he had finished the doctor had advanced and taken her in his arms. When he had concluded, Camilla pondered awhile, then, looking up with a smile and a twinkle, said: "You've turned the ladder upside down, and I'm on the top round."
