REASONS FOR OPPOSING STATEMENT NO. 1

Reporting a meeting of the Republicans in Portland the Evening Telegram says:

In opposing Statement No. 1 Senator Beach predicted not a candidate who favored the statement would be elected, and declared it was his belief that the majority of the Republican party believed likewise. He said he spread recognition of Statement No. 1 would elect a Democrat to the United States senate, and that the Republican candidate for the senate would be beaten by Governor Chamberlain if Statement No. 1 prevails.

This statement of Mr. Beach has the merit of frankness. It is not couched in words of the demagogue and hypocrite, and it is not necessary to read between the lines to grasp the meaning of this machine politician. He says plainly and without equivocation that he wishes Statement No. 1 brushed aside in order that the election of a Republican senator may be made a certainty.

For the sake of Governor Verdenman, we trust that either the statement that he is going to be an editor or the one that he is going on the lecture platform is wrong. It's a combination that seldom works well in double harness.

We take it that Congressman Gordon, of Tennessee, who has introduced a bill barring horse-race betting tickets and newspapers containing betting information from the mails, is not much of a "sport."

It's dead easy for any man to stand for the ideal system, but it requires both moral courage and magnanimity to hand over the cards and say, "You deal for a change."

sary to look any further than Beach, Hodson, et al, for the answer.

There are some things which crop up in the divorce courts occasionally that are absolutely funny. For instance a man down in San Francisco has filed a suit for divorce against his wife, and among other ridiculous things charged against the woman, alleges that she flirted with the minister that married them, and on an occasion when the family was stopping at a summer resort the wife conducted herself shamefully with an old man staying at the same place, who was withered with paralysis. Finally, the defendant, in this remarkable divorce suit, was attacked with appendicitis and when she was on the operating table her dominant characteristic prevailed and she flirted with the surgeon who performed the operation. The judge hearing the case should throw it out of court as being too absurd for the records. Then the plaintiff should be severely censured for presuming to trifle with the dignity of the court.

After all there are other jobs which are better than being a king. Possibly the work is all right and the pay good, but the risk to life is too great for the nerves of the ordinary mortal. In this connection it is related by the dispatches that when the Czar of Russia read about the assassination of the King of Portugal in the papers he was greatly depressed. If that sort of news would not depress a person in the position of the czar of Russia he must be a man insensible to fear, especially when he well knows that an anarchist is crouching around the corner with a stick of dynamite in his hand waiting for him to come forth and be blown into fragments. Anybody that wants to be a king can have the job for all of us—the stunt is entirely too risky for a peace-loving citizen.

Attorney Littleton, chief counsel in the defense of Harry Thaw, is said to have withdrawn from the case of the young Pittsburg millionaire, who killed Stanford White. He succeeded in having him acquitted on the ground of insanity, but now that Thaw is safely incarcerated in a mad house Littleton is perfectly willing that he should remain there. And if everything testified to by the witnesses in the case was true the asylum is the best place for the man and he should be kept there for the remainder of his natural life. Men of the Thaw type are of no use to the world in any capacity. Society can get along very well without them.

Some idea of the importance of railway construction operations to our lumber interests is contained in the statement that during 1906 over 100,000,000 cross ties were supplied to the steam and electric railways of the United States, costing approximately $50,000,000, says the Oregon Timberman. The building of 2,000 miles of new railway in the Pacific Northwest, employing 2,800 ties to the mile, will result in the expenditure of about $5,000,000 for timber products for this branch of construction alone.

For the sake of Governor Verdenman, we trust that either the statement that he is going to be an editor or the one that he is going on the lecture platform is wrong. It's a combination that seldom works well in double harness.

Whatever may be his political future Governor Hughes will not, unless he changes radically, have to accuse himself of having talked too much.
