SENATOR BOOTH HAS GOOD WOLF HUNT

A telephone message to The Guard from Henry Mathews at Goshen this afternoon brings the information that Senator R. A. Booth and son with their dogs were hunting wolves near there today and the dogs chased one around the mountain several times, finally cornering it in the yard of Eph Mathews, where it was killed. Senator Booth and the others who participated enjoyed the chase immensely.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is very hard not to economize when you haven't got money.
Many a woman not otherwise a good cook is a good roaster.
The woman who can gossip and won't is secretly disliked by the rest of her sex.

Some very worthy men aren't worth a cent.
Your lot of interfering friends who get you into trouble aren't around interfering when you are about to get what's coming to you.

The busy man is never too busy to die, and it doesn't take him long to do it either.

Some people can't believe what they see, and others can't see what they believe.

The man who proudly boasts that he hasn't an illusion left will always edge up a little closer to the man who is demonstrating the cure for baldness.

It is one thing to make a living and another thing to get the man on your back let you enjoy it.

It must be that the people who give advice are too busy about it to use any of it themselves.

MY UNAVAILABLE EDUCATION.

We women are handicapped in the professions by the fact that we may marry. It's like building on foundations that may crumble away. When a man chooses a career he knows that the more of a family he gets the more proficient he must be in his work. A woman knows that even a husband is liable to prevent her taking advantage of years of preparation.

Realizing this, I determined when I began to study medicine that I would never marry. My friends appeared doubtful, saying that I was too good looking to remain single. I put this down to flattery and pursued my studies, then took hospital work.

On coming out of the hospital I hung out my shingle in a quiet street, resolving to practice only among women and children. I hadn't been settled a week before I received a call from an old lady living directly opposite, who wished me to go over to her house and see her son. "The poor boy," she said, "has always been strong and well till four or five days ago, when he had trouble with his heart. Do come and see him." Supposing from her words that her son was a boy, I went over. There, reclining on an easy chair, was a young man not less than twenty-five years old. He showed no outward signs of illness, his color being good, though when I took his hand to test his heart beat I found his pulse quite rapid. I asked him to give me his symptoms, which he did in these words:

"A few days ago I was looking out of my window. I remember the circumstances well. It was about 2 o'clock. A cart was lumbering up the street. You opened your front door and went out. Suddenly my heart, which had always beat regularly, began to jump and flutter. I fell back on this chair and waited for the unusual action to subside. It finally did so, but it returns every day and about the same time."

"Do you drink coffee?"
"Yes."
"Stop it at once."
"Liquors?"
"Occasionally."
"Stop them too."
"Smoke?"
"He smokes all the time," his mother put in.
"Stop smoking, but gradually—two cigars a day for awhile, then one and finally none."

He looked quite cut up, but said presently, "Well, seeing it's you, I'll do it, but there's no other doctor in Christendom that could persuade me." "That's the advantage of a woman physician," said the mother. "Men are dictatorial and unsympathetic." I put my ear down on to the patient's chest to hear the beating of his heart. It certainly beat rapidly, but I could hear no sounds denoting any organic difficulty. I told him that his trouble was nervous and by following my directions he would soon be free from it. I went away not expecting to be called in again.

Within a week my patient's mother came over to say that her son, notwithstanding that he had followed my recommendations, had daily recurrences of his trouble. I asked her when they came on, and she said about 2 o'clock. This was the hour that I went out on my afternoon round of professional calls, and I agreed to go in the next day to see the patient. I went the next day directly from my office across the street and found the young man looking well enough, but the action of his heart was certainly above the normal.

Well, I attended him for several months, his condition remaining much the same. I found my visits to him a relief, for instead of talking about his ailment he seemed to attach little importance to it and chatted delightfully on other subjects. Many a time when visiting him I would suddenly discover that my time had been slipping away and I must curtail my afternoon calls. Indeed, there were times when I found I had neglected some important case.

One afternoon when our meeting had been especially delightful my patient said to me:
"I have told you a great deal about my heart, but you have told me nothing about yours. Mine beats wildly whenever I see you go out on your round of afternoon visits. At other times it is normal. In other words, it has beat for you ever since I first saw you leave your office. I would know if yours does not beat for me."

I rose with dignity, not to say irritation, and replied:
"Do you mean to tell me that you have been fooling me all this time?"
"My heart is affected."
"For—for me only?"
"For you only. I can't love but one woman at one time."

Opposing currents struggled within me. I was vexed to have been treated like a well, like a woman instead of a physician. Nevertheless I could not keep down a delicious sensation that I was loved. However, I maintained a professional status.
"My time," I said curtly, "is as valuable when visiting one whose intention is to make a fool of me as a patient who needs me. I shall make you pay for this."

I strode out of the room. But I was too late. The fellow had caught me. I tried to stay away from him and keep him away from me. It was no use. The paws of the trap closed about me. I married him and lost the results of six years' hard work.
And yet, while I don't wish to dissuade others of my sex from studying professions, I must admit that my life with my husband and my children has been in keeping with nature, and I have not regretted marrying.
HELOISE AMES.

COURT DECIDED

IN HIS FAVOR

Cooper Fought to Retain the Formula Which Has Made Him a Fortune

L. T. Cooper, the man who believes that 99 per cent of all ill health of this generation is caused by stomach trouble, is fast winning a national faith in his theory. His claim is now admitted by a surprising number of people throughout the country, and he is gaining new adherents every day.

While speaking of his success in a recent interview, Mr. Cooper said: "I believed ten years ago that any one who could produce a formula that would thoroughly regulate the stomach would have a fortune. When I introduced, as I have said before, within six months that I was right, and that my fortune was made." I called the medicine Cooper's New Discovery, although I did not get up the formula. I have owned it, however, for over three years. I have had one lawsuit over it, which I won in the courts. When it was settled the Cooper Medicine Company became the only firm in the world that can prepare the medicine. The preparation has sold like wildfire wherever introduced. As I have said before it is successful simply because it puts the stomach in perfect shape, then nature does the rest. There are any number of complaints never before associated with stomach trouble that the medicine has alleviated in thousands of cases."

"Among statements obtained recently from users of this medicine that is arousing such universal discussion is one from Mrs. Emma Stanley, living in Chicago, at 713 Washington boulevard, who said: 'Perhaps I had the most complicated case that Mr. Cooper had to deal with. I was troubled for years with my stomach. I consulted with doctors and took many patent medicine preparations without result. My stomach was in such wretched condition that I could not enjoy a meal that I ate. I was very nervous and could hardly sleep; I had a roaring in my ears and dancing spots before my eyes. I felt very bad and weak. Then there was a sore spot at the pit of my stomach that nearly set me wild. I heard about the Cooper medicine and decided to try it. I used four bottles and the improvement in my case has been really wonderful. My nerves have been quieted, and I am so much improved that I feel like a new woman. I cannot say too much for these wonderful remedies, for they have made me well.'"

We sell the Cooper medicines and consider them well worth a trial by any one afflicted with chronic stomach trouble and its attendant diseases.—Hull's Red Cross Drug Store.
