GUARD GUARANTEES

LARGEST CIRCULATION
The Daily and Weekly Guard have a larger bona fide subscription list than any other newspaper in Lane county, and will accept advertisements on this guarantee or money refunded. We are ready at any time to "show down" with our mailing lists and subscription books, and stand ready to forfeit $100 to any charitable institution if any competitor in the field is able to show to a committee of reputable business men that our claim is not true.

OREGON IS PROUD

OF UNIVERSITY CITY

It must be admitted even by the most unprogressive citizen that there is much satisfaction in living in a town that is recognized as a model in all those up-to-date improvements and conveniences that go to make up a modern city. That Eugene is such a town is the impression of every visitor who was here yesterday, and all carried away with them good opinions of the University city that will bear fruit in all time to come. A day ago the Portland Oregonian and other papers gave our people the advice to fix up our walks and streets and show a proper spirit of enterprise before they criticized the people for withholding proper support from the University; in short, we were told that we must do something to create a feeling of pride throughout the state in the location of its principal institution of learning before we had a right to read the taxpayers a lecture on liberality and enterprise.

That this advice was well-timed and has been heeded and is now a matter of public knowledge throughout the Northwest goes without saying. Eugene, because of the awakening of its people, has been transformed from an ordinary country town into a modern city in the short space of one year. Its achievements in the way of substantial and permanent improvements has become an object lesson to other communities, and the people of Oregon are today proud of their University city. This enterprise, like virtue, is its own reward.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

RESERVES TIMBER LANDS

Many Lane county people are interested in British Columbia timber lands, and for that reason the following bulletin issued by the United States forest service will be of interest locally:
"At one stroke of the lieutenant-governor's pen 150,000,000 acres of forest land in British Columbia have been placed in reserves. This includes every acre of the province's timber lands, except what has been leased. This is as much land as was put in the national forests of this country between the years 1891 and 1907.

The action was taken to check wasteful exploitation of timber resources and to bring the care and cutting of timber more effectively under government control.
The province has been leasing timberland instead of selling it. The most of the leasing has been done in the past three or four years, and Americans hold the largest part of the 16,000 leases now in force. The lease is, in its effect, a long-term contract at low rate. It runs twenty years and may be renewed at the end of the first term. The lessee pays twenty-five cents a year until he is ready to cut the timber, when he pays a royalty of 50 cents per 1000 feet, board measure, for the timber removed. The income of the province from leases was about $1,275,000 last year.

"British Columbia is the latest of the great soft wood timber regions to be invaded by lumbermen. The great industry began its work in Maine two or three generations ago, passed later to the pine and hemlock forests of Pennsylvania and New York, and when the supply ran short, they moved to Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The pine woods of the Lake States held out for a long time, but the decline finally became so rapid that the scene of operations was shifted to Washington and Oregon. The output of the Puget Sound region rose to first place, and is still at the top notch. But holdings are harder to get, and buyers and speculators have crossed into British Columbia. While there are many rich stands of timber in the province, it is doubtful if the forest woods furnish a cut of more than 100 to 150 billion feet of lumber—less than what this country uses in eighteen months.

"British Columbia does not permit the export of logs out on provincial land. They must be sawed by mills in the province, which evidently intends to take care of its timber, but to make the most out of it. An export duty has been seriously considered for all the provinces of Canada. It is apparent that British Columbia will not be slow to take any advantage which the further diminishing of the timber supply of the United States may afford her in the lumber trade."

The president has recently signed a proclamation creating additions in Trinity national forest, California, amounting to 350,471 acres. The additions to the reserve are contiguous tracts of timber lying for the most part in Humboldt and Trinity counties, with smaller areas in Shasta and Tehama counties. This new land brings the total area of the Trinity forest up to nearly 1,600,000 acres. There are many opportunities for the development of light power from the numerous streams which have their sources in this region. An added advantage coming from the proper management of the forest will be the protection of the drainage basin of the Upper Mad river, and the probable checking of floods, which are frequent because of the deforested watershed.

Whether Tom Lawson made his offer to bet $100,000 to $75,000 that Roosevelt gets a third term as a bluff to convince the people that he still has money, or just to keep himself in the limelight, will not affect Teddy's disgust.

Why a woman, trying her best, fails to retain the interest of her husband, and can get that of another woman's without trying at all might be tackled by some woman's club in search of a debatable question.

No matter what you may think, wouldn't it be more on all fours with a square deal to wait until the Cubans are again trying to walk alone before starting in to predict how soon they will take another tumble?

One of the five bills passed at the first session of the Philippine legislature provided for an increase in the pay of the legislators. Still, there are men who think the Philippines are slow.

King-killing is one way to advertise a country, but Portugal will find as other countries have found—that it isn't the kind that pays.

PROMINENT FIRMS

IN CONCISE FORM

In today's issue of The Guard we wish to call the attention of our readers to page seven. The business men and merchants of Eugene have always been known for their liberality and progressiveness when it comes to advertising their home city and its resources. Page seven comprises the names of forty-nine leading business firms, and to do the advertisers justice a category of all of them would more than fill the space of the paper. But we trust that the purchasing public will bear in mind the firms on this page, in their different lines of endeavor. In connection with this page a hanger will be printed and framed, and hung up in the prominent offices and public places, which it is hoped will be of use and benefit to the public as well as to the advertisers who made this page possible.

OPPOSED TO INITIATIVE

(Pacific Outlook, Rep.)
As the time of the balloting draws near it becomes more evident that the bosses, the powers of darkness and the Oregonian are alligned in opposition to both the initiative and the referendum and to Statement No. 1. Only the Democratic party stands for the latter, with any degree of unanimity. The Republicans are divided upon the issue, with the biggest half either wavering betwixt or between or outspokenly opposed.

The Oregonian devotes whole columns to the task of demonstrating (?) that these "political vagaries" are not only a menace to the Republican party's remains, but to the peace and welfare of the state. And no one will dispute that there is a streak of truth and logic in its position on the initiative proposition. This form of legislation is mighty expensive. It will cost the state not less than $20,000 to put the 19 initiative and referendum measures upon the ballots. It is true that it opens the way for legislative freaks, hobbies and graft schemes. But let us rest assured that no measure that the people may enact into a statute, though it be through carelessness or ignorance, can surpass in freakishness or viciousness some of the laws that have been passed by Oregon Assemblies during the past 30 years. Not even a school boy needs to be told that there is less chance of jobbery in an initiative measure which passes before the entire body of voters than there is in a legislature which 25 per cent of the members make their own judgment and the interests of the state subservient to personal or factional ends. And let nothing separate the voter from this truth; that the welfare of the masses can never suffer to any great extent by the extension of the prerogatives of government to the people; in other words, by the natural development and broadening of democratic principles.
