PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

Portland, Or., Feb. 19.—Dealers report a smaller amount of chickens coming to market. Receipts today were smaller than expected. Country shippers seem to be holding back for the appearance of an improved market, but the trade expects little improvement as long as eastern stock is offered on the present basis. Receipts of eggs are accumulating along the streets and some dealers are quoting as low as 22c today, with others claiming to sell 1 cent above that figure. In any event the market is gathering weakness and those selling at the lower figure consider themselves fortunate in getting from under a falling market. Dressed meats are in small supply again and the market is firmer and sales are being made mostly at top figures.

Salmon Catch is Increasing.

The long expected increase in the run of salmon has put in an appearance and fishers report a continuous line of chinooks from Astoria to Oregon City. This is the first great run of the present season and the trade expects it to continue for some time. Not only are there great numbers of Chinooks in the river, but steelheads are in large supply. Receipts in this city during the 24 hours were greatly increased and the trade expects that lower prices will soon result from a continuance of present conditions. Old prices still in effect today. Nobody Wants Goat Meat. Goats are by far the weakest feature in the front street fresh meat market. A few are received from up the valley every week, but they drag at whatever price is asked for them, and dealers are of the opinion that if the animals are valuable for any other purpose it would be better to keep them than to slaughter them for the market. Prices quoted today were 1 to 3 cents a pound, and there is but little demand for them even at those figures.

Dressed Turkeys Drag.

Receipts of dressed turkeys today were rather in excess of the demand, and the market was weak, for at this time of the year, there is usually but little call for such stock. The top price quoted was 15 cents. Live turkeys are not salable. Chickens and hens also move slowly with 12 1-2 cents the highest price quoted. Receipts were moderate. Eggs were weak at 22 to 25 cents, the demand in the north have fallen off to a considerable extent.

Orange Market is Firm.

Oranges are firm in the south and in the local market as well, but prices have undergone no change. Not many are now moving this way, but the movement from California to the East is reported heavy. Japanese oranges are about cleaned up here and no further shipments of the fruit to this market are expected this season. Other fruits generally are in fair supply and selling at the same prices as for some days past.

Celery Supply is Limited.

One car of celery came in from Los Angeles today and another is due Thursday. Beyond that, it is said, little, if any more celery will come in from the South, as stocks in California are about exhausted. The market here and in the South is firm, but there were no changes in prices today. The car that arrived yesterday and was reported rejected was taken up at a reduced price later in the day.

Too Much Inferior Veal.

Over-large receipts of veal that has to be rated as coarse and ill-fed tend to weaken the market for the better grades, and the best quotations on the latter today were 8 1-2 to 9 cents. The bulk of the stuff received goes at 7 to 8 cents. Dealers look for lower prices as the season advances. The pork market is well maintained, receipts being only moderate and prices the same as for several days past. Hop Transactions at Low Figures. There is still a considerable amount of business reported in the local hop market. Dealers continue to announce purchase from growers, but all transactions are at low figures, generally around 10 cents a pound. The business at this time is mainly from the smaller growers, who buy only in small lots.

Brief Notes of the Trade.

A mixed car of vegetables was among the arrivals from the South this morning. Broker Martin reports a car of oranges for Bell & Co. this morning. Orange market is somewhat weaker owing to the large supplies. Transactions are in better demand, owing to the improved quality. Points market nominal, with practically no California business reported. Celery market is firmer and some are quoting an advance of 25c today. Some very choice head lettuce is being received from Los Angeles. Selling at 75c a dozen. Mexican tomatoes are still arriving in fine shape and price is firmly maintained at $3.50 per box. Front Street sells at the following prices. Prices paid shippers are less regular commissions: PORTLAND MARKET REPORT Creamery Butter—30c @ 35c. Eggs—22 @ 23c. Chickens—12 @ 13c. EUGENE PROPERTY WILL GROW VALUABLE

Blair street addition property is sure to double in value within the next two years. Two electric railroads are coming up the valley from Portland and both of them must enter the city from the west, and the line that will tap the Siuslaw country can not go out in any other direction. As sure as water runs down hill, Eugene must build down the valley—because the business is there. There are both acreage tracts and large lots in this addition, only a mile from the business center and three blocks from the Geary public school. Prices are very reasonable and you may make your own terms, a small payment down and monthly installments if you desire.

The Jumping Off Place

"Consumption had me in its grasp, and I had almost reached the jumping off place when I was advised to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I want to say right now it saved my life. As a remedy for coughs and colds and healer of weak, sore lungs, and for preventing pneumonia New Discovery is supreme. 50c and $1 at W. A. Kuykendall's drug store. Trial bottle free.

MR. PRIGMORE'S ASSURANCE.

The ice season was on, and a party of young men and women were taking advantage of it for skimming the icy surface of one of those little bays lying along the coast of Long Island. There were Harry Morro, Marjorie Kent and Guthrie Prigmore. There were a lot more, but these three are the only ones who figure in this story. Prigmore was rich, domineering and one of those reckless men whose recklessness is usually folly. With women he counted for far more than he was intrinsically worth. Morro was modest and, though cool, had a very keen appreciation of danger, especially of that attending ice boating. Nevertheless he was fond of sports, and of no sport was he more fond than this same gliding over ice on steel runners.

Prigmore had joined the party at the Bayside hotel, a stranger to most of them. He had not been there six hours before every girl set her cap for him. This didn't matter much for any of the men except Morro, who had been attentive to Miss Kent, and they were supposed to be on the eve of an engagement. When the party left the hotel and went down to the ice boats it was expected that each of the men would take out a girl and that Harry Morro would take Marjorie Kent. What did Prigmore do without consulting preferences but hand Marjorie on to a boat and get on himself. This assurance was just what captured the girls, and Marjorie couldn't help casting a covetous glance at her lover, as much as to say, "Isn't it nice to be preferred by this splendid fellow to all the others?" Harry looked anxious. "Have you ever run an ice boat, Mr. Prigmore?" he asked.

"I was born on one," Prigmore replied gayly, and letting out the sail, he started, as he was bound to do in everything, to lead the party. He hadn't gone a hundred yards, however, before his sail jibed, the boom just grazing Marjorie's head. "There'll be trouble there," muttered one of the men. "He doesn't know how to sail an ice boat." Most of the couples stopped to watch the favorite. A strong wind was blowing from across the bay. Prigmore and Miss Kent were well out on the ice when they were observed trying very hard to do something, but what was not apparent. "Great heavens," exclaimed Morro, paling, "the sheet's fouled the tiller! He can't bring her up into the wind."

On the opposite shore the breakers had broken up the ice and were rolling in on the sand. If the occupants of the ice boat failed to release the sheet, they could not bring the boat up into the wind and they would go over the edge of the hard ice and be pounded with the broken pieces on the beach. But with the wind puffing on the sail they were not likely to get it back to disengage the sheet. Morro jumped into an ice boat and started after them. Now began a race between life and death. Morro was an expert ice boat man and knew how to get the best speed out of his boat. He was watched anxiously by the party on the shore, who kept the chased boat in view as well. From the start he gained, but could he catch the couple before they shot over the edge of hard ice? The only advantage he had was that their efforts somewhat retarded the speed of their boat.

In time Morro got within a hundred feet of them, they being within some 600 feet of the breakers, both boats going at a terrific speed. The sight before them was awful. The breakers rolled in, throwing up the anchor ice, dashing it down, then sucking it under the flow for another break. The party on the opposite shore stood looking on in ghastly silence. Nearer and nearer Morro approached the yacht he chased, and at last they could see him, as they supposed, fouled with it. Then the two boats began to spread apart, the sheet of Morro's being eased off and making a sharp turn in which only a considerable weight over the raised skate kept the boat from going over.

Morro had steered his yacht alongside of the other. Prigmore, without waiting for Marjorie to save herself, made a jump and caught a projection on Morro's boat. Morro reached for Marjorie and drew her safely over the cap. Then, directing her and Prigmore to get on the windward side, he spun his boat around sharply and put her before the wind. A crack in the ice like a pistol shot beneath the runners made every heart stand still, but the headway saved them, and in ten seconds more they were out of danger. The sight of the abandoned yacht shooting over into the broken ice and pounded with it gave them a shudder, and they drew a deep sigh of relief.

Sailing before a fresh wind, it was not long before saver and saved approached the party standing on the shore, who gave one yell of welcome, the men throwing up their hats, the girls waving. When they left the boat Marjorie Kent fell on the neck of one of her girl friends, hid her face and trembled. Prigmore's assurance had given place to a ghastly look of terror. Morro bustled himself lowering the sail of his boat.

There was something in the narrow escape that detained the women from venturing on the boats, and the party returned to the city. Morro was too generous to tell of Prigmore's having saved himself in place of Marjorie. Marjorie tried to keep her secret, but failed. Prigmore had come into the party like a powder keg and gone down like a dynamite. He was not seen again by any of them.
