Pittsburg, Feb. 22.—Saved from drowning in the icy waters of the Monongahela at Elizabeth only to be run down and killed by a train on the shore was the fate last night of J. W. Draper and F. B. Barrett, government employees at Lockport, Pa. Draper, who saved the other from drowning, was also hit by the train and probably fatally hurt. Barrett fell into the river and Garrett stepped in after him, and eventually rescued both men with the aid of a boat hook. Then all three were carried to the Pittsburg hospital to get dry clothes. The up-train of the train was not noticed, and the men were struck and killed.

The commerce of the city also reflects the secret uneasiness of the people. El Seculo (newspaper) expresses the opinion that everything indicates that the government fears armed revolutionary outbreaks.

GOVERNOR CHARLES EVANS HUGHES SPEAKS ON CHARACTER OF WASHINGTON BEFORE UNION LEAGUE CLUB AT CHICAGO

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—The principal features of the Washington's birthday celebration in Chicago, held as usual under the auspices of the Union League Club, and the chief orator of the day, was Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, whose address was devoted chiefly to the various phases of the character of Washington. The speaker was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause. Later a second meeting was held in Orchestra hall, at which Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, delivered the chief address. President Wheeler spoke on the subject, "The University in the Republic." He declared that while General Washington was in his life a staid and proper personality, there seemed to be some danger that men with the lapse of time would lose sight of the actual characteristics he possessed. Before he had become a symbol and a name, he declared.

the American people had some things to learn from the real man, Washington, and some debts to pay him. "Washington," said President Wheeler, "repeatedly and earnestly recommended the foundation of a federal city of a national university, and in his will attempted to make provision for the nucleus of an endowment for it. As yet nothing has been done. We reverse his name and image beyond measure, we quote his words of advice and assume to be guided by their generalities, but the one exact and specific recommendation upon which he laid the stress of a vital position we have overlooked and ignored." After quoting from Washington's letters to show the great interest he felt in the foundation of a national university, the speaker continued: "Jefferson, with his heart in the single state, devised the state university. Washington, with his heart in the federal nation, conceived the type of national university, and though his desire has thus far been rebuffed, the very ripening to success of the state university within these latest years has now brought in the day when the national type is demanded as the crown and cap stone. "The actual foundation of the university," the speaker declared, "is already at Washington. The congressional library is really the library of the national university, and this, when joined to the various scientific branches of the government, constituted the real nucleus of the university. "I am not here," said President Wheeler, "to plead for the establishment of a national university. My one desire is to emphasize that Washington's conception of such an institution gave it an undisputed public character, placed it under public support and control, and devoted it directly to the betterment of public and political conditions. "Governor Hughes' Address. "We venerate Washington because in supreme test he vindicated manhood. The standards of virtue were unsullied in his hands. We must all take to heart that lesson of his life if we are to realize American ideals. It is the lesson of the supremacy of duty. It is the lesson of honor—of fidelity to trust. It must be enforced in executive legislative chambers, in courts of justice, in newspaper offices, in banks, in trust and insurance companies, in professional and commercial life, in the markets of trade, in the counting room and in the shop, by employer and employed. "There is no legislative road to character. If the spirit of Washington could permeate our public and private life, we should neither seek nor need governmental panacea, and it is only insofar as in fact that the government imbues administration that the government of a free people can perform its functions. "The country is morally sound. Its standards of business are higher. The business men of the country are for the most part honest men, representing fairly the moral standards of the people and never more than today have they taken a whole, earnestly desired, that abuses shall be stopped, that an end shall

Where Cash Beats Credit

MORMON CAPITAL MAY BUILD ROAD TO PRINEVILLE

Hood River, Or., Feb. 21.—If preliminary plans being promoted by wealthy capitalists of Salt Lake City, who own the Mount Hood railroad extending up Hood River valley, and along the Sumpter Valley road, running out of Baker City, northeastern Oregon may have a railroad in the near future that will open up its many resources. The project provides for the extension of the Mount Hood line through the mountains east of Mount Hood, and a party of surveyors are now in the field trying to locate a pass through the mountains. The work is in charge of Joseph A. West, chief engineer of the Sumpter Valley road.

PORTLAND PLANTS FIVE THOUSAND ROSE BUSHES

Portland, Feb. 22.—Under a clear sky and June-like sun thousands of Portland school children and tens of thousands of citizens and visitors participated this afternoon in "Rose Planting Day," preliminary to the rose festival to be held the first week in June, when it is expected that fifty thousand visitors will be guests of the city. Five thousand rose bushes were planted today in the three city park blocks. There were also patriotic exercises and addresses by Governor Chamberlain, Mayor Lane and other officials.

PROSECUTOR TOLD BOY TO SWEAR AWAY MAN'S LIFE

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Eighteen-year-old Jerry M. V. Vral, whose testimony more than that of any other person served to convict the Bohemian fortune teller, Herman Bilik, of the murder of six members of the Vzal family, has, it is announced, recanted in an affidavit which declares the testimony was simply perjury. Bilik is under sentence to hang on March 20, and the supreme court on Tuesday affirmed the judgment. The Vzal boy also declares that two of his relatives also lied, asserting that the vital part of the testimony he gave against Bilik at the trial was taught him by a high police official and an assistant state's attorney. He names the men he accuses and in the affidavit says he told the story because the police official threatened him with a charge of murder unless he did as the police wished him. He declares he was in forty conferences with the assistant state's attorney and fifty with the inspector of police. The confession from the boy was obtained by Rev. J. P. O'Callaghan, who has been working in Bilik's behalf for several months.

WOMAN AYS HER HUSBAND IS MURDERER

Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—Following a heated quarrel, which took place in their room in the Hotel Catalina, Mrs. E. Fraser today denounced her husband as a murderer and surrendered him to the police. She says Fraser, alias Boyd, committed a murder in Indianapolis four years ago, but all efforts to secure the details of the crime are unavailing, neither the woman nor the police making public any of the facts.

WILL NOT PROTEST AGAINST JAPANESE IN MANCHURIA

Washington, Feb. 22.—It is stated with positiveness at the state department today that no official reports or protests from any source have been received regarding Japanese commercial aggressiveness in Manchuria, and from the nature of the situation none is expected. It is asserted the American government has no intention of addressing Japan or any other power on the subject at this time or when the battalions fleet reaches its destination. In this connection it is explained that the open-door policy in the Orient, while initiated by this government, is rather an announcement of principle to guide our own course, rather than to be arbitrarily applied and enforced to the Orient.
