large pay received and the thrill of war, which they loved. The chief gunners were all of the Caucasian race, according to the story of one of the adventurers. The chief engineers and engineers' mates on all the ships were foreigners. They would go into the service of any country, and their choice would be for the one offering the largest pay.

This story, while coming from a source subject to question, seems so formal as to deserve some weight. If it is all fact, it puts new light on the success of the Japanese. The handling of the guns and ships looked like the work of veterans, and as done by a nation without previous experience in such matters it was marvelous.

In any case, if these ships ever run up against a fleet manned by American boys of high intelligence and patriotism and careful training, the battle will not be one-sided, unless it be all on our side.

A special dispatch in the Oregonian explains the Kentucky senatorial election as follows: "It is pointed out by Democrats here that the Kentucky situation is particularly calculated to occasion resentment. Not only has it shown the extremity to which the liquor interests will go, but it is declared to be a body blow to primary elections as a method of determining senatorial nominees."

Why do they rage? (People's Press, Rep.) Why do the wicked rage and imagine vain things? The real reason for the opposition of a considerable number of the papers to Statement No. 1 and the direct primary system generally would be interesting to their honest readers and the voters of the state besides. We don't know how it impresses the average man, but to date we have not discovered an Oregon newspaper that was openly fighting Statement No. 1, and that was avowedly trying to thwart the will of the people that did not have some motives and plans in entire accord with the tenor of its remarks against Statement No. 1.

There is one defect in the Tennessee lady's plan to settle the race question by distributing the negroes equally among all the states—the objection of the people of the states which would have to increase their negro population.

Those who had doubts of Nick Longworth's loyalty to the administration can dismiss them. He is not only a red-hot administration man, but a self-appointed deputy-wielder of the big stick.

Well, anyway, Harriman's daughter is going to marry an American. The ceremony will be pulled off in a New York church, March 3, at noon. But Stuyvesant Fish will not be there.

SIUSLAW ITEMS IN BRIEF FROM THE WEST. Papers were signed at Mapleton Tuesday by which Harper Workman and wife sold and transferred their ranch on the river above Acme to J. N. Fredrickson.

The school in Bernhardt's district will open next Monday for the spring term with Miss Katherine Leverage as teacher.

A change is to take place in the management of the Mapleton hotel March 1. Charles Beach, who has had the hotel leased for the past year, will retire from the business and R. H. Clow will take charge again.

From E. K. Benedict we learn that the Siuslaw Boom Company has just finished clearing the drift out of their logs and there are no more drift logs in the boom to be turned loose in the river. Mr. Benedict states that this is the earliest in the season that they have finished sorting over the logs and separating them from the drift.

Last Saturday J. H. Pratt and Al Ready agreed upon terms for an exchange of property, and some money has been paid to bind the bargain. By the deal Ready obtains Pratt's ranch on South Slough by giving him in exchange his residence property in Florence and paying him the difference. Mr. Ready intends to move his family to the ranch in a few days. He will reside there and conduct his meat market in town.—The West.
