CHARACTER OF NEWS THAT SHOULD BE PRINTED

In an address before the "Talk It Out Club" on the attitude of the public toward the newspaper, the editor of the Santa Ana (Calif.) Register gave expression to a number of things which have necessitated explanation on his part, because of the stand which he takes in publishing all the news and telling the plain, unvarnished truth at times about it.

"We must discriminate as to what news. Many newspapers publish matters that are not news. They may be divided into two general classes—the things that the public has a right to know and ought to know, and the things that the public has no right to know and ought not to know."

"The chief of Judge Thomas G. McFarland Portland removes from the ranks of our nation one of the brightest and most promising professional men of the state. Still a young man, he had won many honors through faithful public service, and his splendid talents and thorough integrity had fitted him for greater achievements and larger honors among his fellows."

"Congressman Cox, of Indiana, was going some when he said of his bill to abolish the 20 cents a mile pick-up drawn by congressman for traveling to and from their homes at each session: 'We get a salary as it is. Some of us are paid much more than we could get any place else.' And 'some of us' embraces at least four-fifths of the house."

"While every man is free to refuse to work, if he so desires, it would be a wise move on the part of those who have scheduled a labor strike on April 1, to pass it off as an all-'ools' day joke. This is no time for a big labor strike."

"Nat Goodwin, the comedian, has quit the stage and gone into the mining business at Rawhide, Nevada. After awhile he probably will be looking around for some one to grub-stake him in the show business again."

"The French scientist who says an acute attack of jealousy is frequently fatal will have to guess again. It may be so in France, but there is living evidence a plenty that it isn't in this neck of the woods."

the cheek of every newspaper man who honors his profession. To think that papers like the Oakland Tribune and a whole string of other publications known as the Galkins syndicate, printed in the leading cities of California, will brazenly sell their influence to a gang of disreputable thieves like Ruff and his henchmen, almost passes belief. In the past there have been few real newspapers corrupted by hoodlums and thieves, and it is in this fact that the securing of our national honor seemed secure. Certain California papers, however, seem to have placed more above considerations of public welfare and are attempting to manufacture sentiment in favor of the men who grew rich and powerful in politics upon the bribes paid them by railroad and telephone companies and other corporations intent upon schemes of robbery inimical to the rights of the people.

A man who thinks advertising does not pay stopped with us the other day before a lot where workmen were putting in a heavy basement wall. A great structure was to be erected there. We remarked: "If you stood a block away and looked you would not be able to see a bit of this basement. Would you think it a waste of thousands of dollars?" "Oh, no," replied he, "the foundation is necessary." But he could not see that money spent in advertising is sometimes just as important for the establishment of a foundation of confidence and knowledge, before the superstructure of sales is erected, says the Oregon Tradesman.

During the first eight weeks of 1908 New York shows a net gain of $50,000,000 in currency movement, as compared with $19,800,000 in the same period of 1907, $21,600,000 in 1906, $43,000,000 in 1905, and $47,000,000 in 1904. The bulk of this gain was made in January, for February shows but a slight net gain, much less than that registered in several preceding years. The return movement is imminent, and before many days activity in the West will turn the tide, and money will be flowing to those channels toward the setting sun where development is most rapid and most needed.

The death of Judge Thomas G. McFarland Portland removes from the ranks of our nation one of the brightest and most promising professional men of the state. Still a young man, he had won many honors through faithful public service, and his splendid talents and thorough integrity had fitted him for greater achievements and larger honors among his fellows. Judge Halley's friends were legion, and his untimely death came as a shock to them and they feel it in the sense of a personal bereavement.

"Congressman Cox, of Indiana, was going some when he said of his bill to abolish the 20 cents a mile pick-up drawn by congressman for traveling to and from their homes at each session: 'We get a salary as it is. Some of us are paid much more than we could get any place else.' And 'some of us' embraces at least four-fifths of the house."

"The French scientist who says an acute attack of jealousy is frequently fatal will have to guess again. It may be so in France, but there is living evidence a plenty that it isn't in this neck of the woods."

"Hearst will be a candidate? Hearst will not be a candidate? That sort of thing may be puzzling to the reader, but it serves the purpose of Hearst—keeps him in the public eye."

"If 'America is asleep,' as a public speaker recently declared, she is having an awful nightmare, to judge from the noises heard."

"The kind of public opinion that the average congressman is most responsive to is that which controls a given number of votes in his district."

ARTHUR I. VORYS, TAFT'S MANAGER.

These are indeed busy days for Arthur I. Vorys, for the Taft campaign has grown to such proportions that the management of it has become a tremendous task. The publicity bureau of the Taft boom alone requires the aid of a large force of men, but Mr. Vorys gives every detail of it his personal attention. He is regarded as one of the ablest political managers in the country and, like Secretary Taft himself, is one of the most genial and approachable men in the world. He goes about his managerial work modestly and quietly, but each hour produces results that are a constant source of encouragement to those who are interested in the war secretary's race.

proportion of accounts per head of population nearly one in three. If these proportions were applied to the United States with a population of, say, $2,300,000, there would be in that country 50,000 postal depositaries with 27,400,000 accounts, covering a deposit, in round numbers of $4,600,000,000. But there were in the United States in 1906 only 1319 savings banks, with 8,027,192 accounts, and total deposits of $3,482,137,198. This is an average of $433.80 to each account, indicating that the savings banks are being used by people of comparatively large means, and that person having small sums which they might deposit under favorable conditions do not find convenient depositaries. Of these 298,746 accounts in New Zealand 212,665 had deposits not exceeding $100.

Old Man Rain. At the window pane. Knocks and fumbles and raps again; His long-nailed fingers slip and strain. Old Man Rain at the window pane. Knocks all night, but knocks in vain. Old Man Rain.

Old Man Rain. With battered train. Reels and shambles along the lane; His gray old whiskers drip and drain. Old Man Rain, with ragged train. Reels and staggers like one insane— Old Man Rain.

"Do you ever drink to excess?" asked the girl's father. "I never touch liquor of any kind." "How about tobacco?" "I do not smoke. I never had a cigar or cigarette in my mouth." "Ever gambled?" "Never. I do not know one card from another."

NEW ZEALAND PLAN OF SAVINGS BANKS

Consul-General W. A. Prickett, writing from Auckland on the operations of the government postal savings banks in New Zealand, calls attention to their wide use by the people, as follows: "One of the greatest aids to the financial power of France, with its annual investing surplus of $350,000,000 to $500,000,000, is the facility with which its people can invest their small savings with absolute security. The government system of postal savings banks enables investors to deposit small sums in interest, with the right to withdraw them at will."

New Zealand is a young country, but it has adopted this system with the most gratifying success. Postal savings banks were established by the colonial government in 1857. On December 31, 1906, there were 540 postoffices open for the transaction of savings-bank business, with 298,746 accounts, covering a total deposit of $48,766,325, an average of a little over $166.50 to each account, and representing a sum equal to $56 a head for the entire population of the colony."

Deposits may be made of one shilling (24 1/2 cents) upward, but interest is reckoned only on complete pounds ($4.65). Interest is allowed from month to month, commencing with the first day. Deposits made on the second and subsequent days do not draw interest until the first day of the month succeeding. Accounts may be drawn upon at any time, but interest is allowed on the sum withdrawn only up to the first day of the month of withdrawal. The interest due to each depositor is calculated to December 31 of each year, and is then added to the principal. The rate of interest at present is three and one-half per cent up to $1500; from $1500 to $3000, three per cent; above $3000 no interest is paid. Charitable institutions, however, may draw interest at the maximum rate for any amount they may desire to deposit."

The 540 savings bank postoffices average a depositary for each 1646 persons, and of these 549 have a savings bank account, making the
