METHODS FOR PRACTICAL WORK OF CITY BUILDING

The most practical "boosting" can be done for a town is for people to get together and pull every enterprise that will enhance growth; to bear willingly their part of the burden of expense incident to the making of public improvements. This kind of work beats the high-priced, hot-air promotion that was ever inaugurated.

Eugene's people began to get together about two years ago, and in that time have accomplished almost wonderful results. They have paved streets, secured electric car service and a splendid railroad depot improvement, and are about to take the final steps for securing a municipal water plant, supplied from mountain sources, at a cost of $400,000.

Another splendid and practical way of boosting a town is to support its newspapers. Business men not only benefit themselves, but contribute to the advancement of the community when they patronize the local press, enabling the latter to expand, advertising daily a larger family of readers the advertisement and enterprise of their town.

Booker T. Washington urges his negro brethren to become bankers as well as Pullman porters. What's the use? Isn't the position of porter high enough in the financial scale for Booker? They get all the money from the passengers in their car and that is all that can be expected of anybody.

Our pension roll on account of the Spanish war has already reached $3,471,000 a year and nearly 20,000 claims are still pending in the pension office. Inasmuch as we landed only about 20,000 men at Santiago we may be thankful that Cuba Libre required no larger force.

American snobocracy is beginning to throw fits over the possibility of a visit from the Prince of Wales. If Walesey really comes, some of the more violent of the bunch will probably have to be put in straight jackets.

After all is said and done, it must be admitted that the old-time kings who could not write, had some advantages over the modern rulers who are constantly getting into hot water by the personal letter route.

With all this guessing of what big men of the past would be if they came back, nobody's said anything about the big pirates, probably because everybody knows they would be high financiers.

Pennsylvania farmers' unfilled demands for laborers indicates that of the soup houses maintained in some of the cities of the state for unemployed laborers belong in the hobo gold brick class.

That was a pretty low-down sort of a nature-faker who credited a preacher by name with having succeeded in training a quartette of dogs to sing "Way Down on the Swanee River."

Best Healer in the World.

Rev. F. Starbird, of East Raymond, Maine, says: "I have used Bucklen's Arnica Salve for several years, on my old army wound, and other obstinate sores, and find it the best healer in the world. I use it too with great success in my veterinary business."

declared that too strong an emphasis cannot be placed upon the fact that curtailment is reaching a state where a shortage of goods must inevitably follow. That buyers are creating a market that will raise and force them to pay prices based upon short supply and heavy demand, is the analysis that leading men in the trade make of the situation. Conservatism on the part of the buyers, it is said, is being carried too far. Mills are not in a position to run on speculation and of one accord they are curtailing production. They are forested to this by the weakness that has developed in the market for finished goods and the strength that is shown on the staples. Among the cotton-textile houses the opinion prevails that business is growing stronger, but the improvement is gradual. It comes from a somewhat broader buying on the part of the cutters and secondary market distributors. On export trade is quiet, and no price changes of moment are reported. The opening of lines of blankets is the event that is at present holding the attention of the trade, and there is expectation that the new levels to be named will attract business from the large factors. The finishers of cotton goods are working down their orders and here is good of more business to bear their employment. They have been running for several seasons past on a basis where they were constantly behind on the delivery of goods. Now there is only a small margin of orders between them and delivery. On lines of dress goods for the fall the sales for the majority of mills have come up to a fair percentage of last year, and they will be able to operate on a profitable basis. It is in attempting to get the buyers to place bulk orders that agents find the difference in trade from recent seasons. On some lines of finished broadcloths the mills are reaching a sold-up state and this is helping to put courage in buyers to operate on other lines of goods. In the jobbing houses the last day or two business has been somewhat affected by the bad weather, but the buyers who made an appearance were in search of spot goods and placed a number of orders on wash goods, household linens, dress goods and domestics.

Judge Calk's positive declaration in favor of the popular election of United States senators by direct vote of the people and his willingness to rest his own chances for success upon their expression of preference through Statement No. 1 of the primary law, cannot be too highly commended. A man who trusts the plain people of his state and avows his complete confidence in their ability to govern themselves, certainly possesses some of the material that goes to make a good United States senator.

Charles D. Wickham, president of the Civic League at Worcester, says the greatest power in American politics is the third party, the heart of it, without organization, which seeks no office, holds no meetings, owns no banner, but which comprises men who think for themselves, hold the balance of power, and silently decide the elections.

Hooker T. Washington urges his negro brethren to become bankers as well as Pullman porters. What's the use? Isn't the position of porter high enough in the financial scale for Booker? They get all the money from the passengers in their car and that is all that can be expected of anybody.

ELLEN BEACH YAW.

Ellen Beach Yaw, who ten years ago started American concert going with her remarkable range of voice, is now a star in the Metropolitan Opera in New York and bids fair to become one of the world's famous singers. Her repertoire includes Juliet, Lucia, "The Magic Flute," "Il Barbiere" and a dozen more grand operas. She still retains her range and is far better trained as an actress than are many of the leading prima donnas.

THE WAIL OF THE DOOMED.

"I'm ready to go" said a plump young bug. As he kicked the earth where'd been a slug;

"I'm tired to death of Arsenate Which covers all that's to be seen; It smarts my stomach and hurts my head; My brothers, one and all, are dead."

"I choose my home," said the Cabbage worm, "Deep in the young plant's tender germ, Alas, the farmer has found me out, With powder and poison he put me to rout, And now I'm a homeless wanderer, Exiled from house and provider."

"On the orchard bough I pitched my tent, Where the twigs by the passing winds are bent, But the farmer comes with flaming torch, Driving me out to escape a scorch; Said Caterpillar: 'My silver tent With a mass of smoke and flames was bent.'"

Said the Henhouse Mite, I'm very small, I thought he'd never see me at all, But 'twas not long till kerosene Came pouring in; I think it's mean To plaster us like with methrum, And the end of all is yet to come."

Cried the currant worm with a voice that tore To the very heart of the soft Pear slug, Who exclaimed, "Aye, aye; 'tis a dreadful drug, It gives convulsions and makes us squirm In a way that's repulsive to every worm."

Then out spoke the Weevil in angry tone: "I'd like to know when the end's to come! Bisulphide of carbon is death to me, The farmer knows it, and I must flee, Who will go with me? We'll emigrate; Whoever remains deserves his fate."

HOW LINN COUNTY STANDS

(Albany Daily Herald, Rep.) A recent report from this county under a Lebanon date line purports to tell the world at large that Linn county Republicans are against Statement No. 1. This is untrue. If as this correspondent says, Statement No. 1 is opposed by a majority of the Republican voters who was it that after laboring for weeks to get a meeting of the county central committee together to "squell" the statement the scheme failed to work? The fact of the matter is that practically all the opposition to Statement No. 1 found in this county is centered around the city of Albany. A few of the old-time politicians and party bosses are endeavoring to supply courage to prospective legislative candidates on the Republican ticket, hoping to get them elected on the "ghost of a chance" they have contrary to the wishes and sentiment of the people. Linn county will send three Statement No. 1 men to the next session of the legislature, the Lebanon correspondent to the contrary notwithstanding.

John Riva, of Young, Ia., says: "I have been selling DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for about a year and they've better satisfaction than any pill I ever sold. I have used them myself with fine results." Sold by all druggists.
