PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

A good many farmers in the Willamette valley who have for years been steadily growing poorer as a result of operations in hops and other products that yield but meager if any returns at all, are beginning to turn their attention to livestock. It can safely be said that hundreds more are waiting for definite assurance that the big packing plant projected here is going to be a success. Then there will be a drastic cut in the hop acreage of this state, and a big cut in the production of a number of other crops that have in recent years failed to score as money-makers.

That is the statement made today by B. J. Hecker, of Hecker Brothers, dealers in livestock, with headquarters at Albany, who came in with a carload of stock yesterday.

"A new era is just now opening in the Willamette valley," said Mr. Hecker, "and the establishment of the mammoth slaughtering and packing plant by the Swift and other interests at Portland is the factor that is making for an industrial revolution in the great agricultural district west of the Cascades. All the farmers want to know is that the packing plant as projected is going to be a success. When they are assured of this they will quit hops and poverty and raise hogs, cattle and sheep for the Portland market."

Provisions Are Advanced Again.

Portland provision market has been affected by the recent sharp advance in the price of various products in the east, including live hogs and the manufactured stock. The Union Meat company here is quoting small hams up to 13 1/2c a pound, which is a net advance of 1/2c over former rulings. Picnics and cottage rolls are advanced a full cent a pound, the former going to 10c and the latter to 11c a pound. A like advance put the price of shoulders to 11c today. In bacon the tendency was fractionally downward owing to the fact that prices in that line had scarcely been hit by the avalanche which struck the general provision market about a month ago. The drop today amounts to but a fraction. The general provision market is in very fine form today; the advance in the price of live hogs in the yards here yesterday to 6c being somewhat of a help toward maintaining the advanced standard for the manufactured line.

Higher Price for Veal.

In the dressed veal market a higher range of values is again in effect. The market for best stock is all the way from 9 to 10c a pound, the latter figure being received by a large receiver. At such high values the returns to the shipper should be heavy. For dressed hogs the front street market is in fine shape because of the very scant arrivals in the stock yards and the higher price ruling there. Some of the best stock is moving off as high as 8c a pound. This is for select small sizes. Large hogs, while showing a disposition to move, are not bringing the top values by any means. This should be taken into consideration by shipper.

Small Fish Are Scarce.

There is a great scarcity of small fish in the local wholesale market. The storms off the coast have prevented the usual catch and in consequence available supplies all over the coast are small, with prices stiff. Razor clams and crabs are likewise hard to obtain, for the same reason. Sacramento salmon is in good supply, but high prices are still the rule in the south, and of course here. The run of smelt has been terminated and no fresh supplies are today in the local market.

Eggs Are Quoted Firmer.

A firmer tone is shown throughout the local egg market today. Available supplies are not so liberal and outside shipments are still very heavy. Alaska shipments predominate, but the local consumption is taking most of the production. The salmon fleet is taking some supplies for use in the far north. Some of these eggs intended for the winter use are packed solid with granulated salt.

For chickens the market remains in very fine shape, with supplies adequate to the demand.

Heavy Output of Lettuce.

According to growers, the present season a much larger growth of lettuce in this vicinity than in any previous season in the history of the industry. The number of houses is materially increased and the plants show more growth than usual. This is due to the rather mild weather that prevailed during the winter. Hothouse cucumbers from the east are in very large supply here and prices are being shaded. Supplies from California heavier, too.

Brief Notes of Front Street.
Two cars of bananas arrived in today in fine shape. Prospects for a banana war growing brighter every day. Local trade is inclined to call the bluff of Ryan of Seattle and several dealers have ordered supplies from other sources.
Shipments of eastern Oregon low rates to Missouri river points are growing, because of the low rate.
While receipts of oranges are heavy, the sales are increasing and prices are stiffening instead of weakening here.
Wheat and flour trade continue nominal.
The temporary weakness in onions has been turned into a means strength locally and the price for the best stock stands firm at $4.50 today along Front Street. While the price in the south is no higher than this, there are few onions from here being offered there at the present time.
