Banking By Mail

It is simply the application to the use of individual depositors of the system in vogue among banks. It is perfectly safe. In the enormous daily exchange between banks of different cities, amounting to millions of dollars, there is never a dollar lost. This method of banking is convenient, private and time-saving. It is of especial advantage to persons living in the country or smaller towns who want the satisfaction of dealing with an absolutely safe bank, or to persons in the city, not so situated that they can conveniently visit the bank in person. When you send your first deposit, you will receive notice of credit and check-book. Your money is perfectly safe when deposited in this old bank with its large capital and surplus.

PILES ASSERTS WAR WITH JAPS LIKELY TO OCCUR

Washington, April 24.—In the debate in the senate today on the proposition of Piles, of Washington, to increase the number of battleships authorized in the naval appropriation bill from two to four, Piles based his contention for four battleships on the possibility of war with Japan. He said the Japanese were irresistibly drawn to our shores by advantages secured here, and that a conflict between them and the Americans was liable to arise at any time; that in such an event the Japanese government might be forced to wage war against the United States, even though the Japanese leaders were unfavorable to such a course. If, he declared, war should come our Western coast would be found unfortified and unprotected by battleships. "If," he said, "we had two fleets we would wage war on no nation and no nation would wage war on us. So I stand for peace in urging four battleships, and not for war."

INTERNATIONAL LAW THEME OF SPEECH

community in which they live the public condemnation and obloquy which would follow a repudiation of the standard of conduct prescribed by that community for its members. Where it happens that the law and public opinion point different ways the latter is invariably the stronger. The force of law is in the public opinion which prescribes it. Conformity to the standard of business integrity, which obtains in the community, is necessary to success. Social custom and standing, power and high place in the professions, in public office, in all associated enterprises depend upon conforming to the standard of conduct. The loss of these is the most severe penalty society can inflict.

"The rules of international law are enforced by the same kind of sanction, less certain and peremptory, but continually increasing in effectiveness of control. A decent respect for the opinions of mankind did not begin with the American declaration of independence, but it is interesting that the public opinion of the world has advanced so that the settlement of disputes between nations are brought about by an appeal to that international public opinion, the power and effectiveness of which the new world has done so much to promote.

"The deference shown to international public opinion is in due proportion to a nation's greatness and advance in civilization. The nearest approach to defiance is found among the most isolated and least civilized of countries, whose ignorance of the world prevents the effect of the world's opinion, and in every such country internal disorder, oppression, poverty and wretchedness mark the penalties which warn mankind that the laws established by civilization for the guidance of national conduct cannot be ignored with impunity.

"Manifestly this power of international public opinion is exercised not so much by governments as by the people of each country whose opinions are interpreted in the press and determine the country's attitude toward the nation whose conduct is under consideration. International opinion is the consensus of individual opinion in the nations. The most certain way to promote obedience to the law of nations and to substitute the power of opinion for the power of armies and navies is, on the one hand, to foster that decent respect for the opinions of mankind which we placed in our declaration of principles of government in 1776, and on the other hand spread among the people of every country a just appreciation of international law to which national conduct ought to conform; that the general opinion whose approval or condemnation supports the sanction of the law may be sound and just, worthy of respect."

PUGILIST TOMMY BURNS IN LONDON CLOTHES.

Tommy Burns, the American pugilist who gathered a big crowd of shovels across the water, can't long in adapting himself to English ways. One of the first things Burns did after defeating Gunner Moir was to rig himself out in fashionable style, with frock coat, top hat, buckled shoes and cane. Billy Nell, Burns' manager, writes enthusiastically to American friends that Tommy even tried to make a mince pie in his eye, but couldn't do it.

SULLIVAN LINES UP ILLINOIS FOR ENEMY

(Continued from Page One.) applause, it is true, came from delegates from other counties than Cook, and other cities than Chicago. Roger C. Sullivan, who dominated the convention from first to last, did not applaud Mr. Bryan's name at any time, but he is not the kind of a man who is given to applauding things, no matter how strong his approval may be. When the demonstration was in progress, after the reading of the Bryan resolution, he rose and stood until the cheers subsided, and then resumed his seat.
