Eugene gives promise of being easily the second city in Oregon in the near future. Boosting and public spirit are doing it.—Portland Journal.

DAYTON NEWSPAPER AND THE UNIVERSITY

The Dayton Optimist, one of the brightest local papers in the state, is making a vigorous and able fight in behalf of adequate support for the State University. In its last issue we find the following:

"Now that the primaries are over and your favorite has either had his hopes realized or has had the "kibosh" put on same, you have a short time to look up and study over the measures to be voted upon at the coming election. When, in going over the list, you come to the University of Oregon appropriation bill, stop and consider it carefully. The arguments are worth reading again and again, and the more you read the more you will be convinced that it is your duty—not only to your pride in your state, but to the welfare of your children—to aid to the utter[most] the alumni of the University in their efforts to gain for Oregon the same educational privileges enjoyed in all other states."

STANDING BY HOME INDUSTRIES IS URGED

The Baker City Herald strongly urges its readers to stand by home industries. In a recent editorial it presents arguments that are unanswerable and apply, not only to its own city, but to every town in Oregon that is ambitious to grow and prosper. The Herald says:

"No city can prosper as it should unless there is a well defined spirit of standing by home institutions. In making purchases it is a duty every man owes to his community to spend his money with the firm that is owned by home people; people who have investments here, who have confidence enough in Baker City to take part of the responsibility of building the town.

"Over in Walla Walla there has recently been organized a society for promulgating and fostering the home industry patronage idea, and the same thing would hold good in Baker. Just listen to a little argument: Does it stand to reason that the firm which is doing business here today and is gone tomorrow should be deserving of your trade, as compared with a substantial institution that spends its profits right back into the town? Does it stand to reason that the profit from your business will do as much good to Baker City when turned over to people who have little interest in the community as it will when placed in the hands of men who have their all invested here?"

STATE SUPERINTENDENT ACKERMAN'S VIEWS

State Superintendent Ackerman takes the view that the public school system of Oregon can be improved only by strengthening the State University. To weaken the University is to lower the standard of our educational system is the position he takes, according to the following report of a recent address, which he delivered at Astoria, and printed in the Daily Astorian of that city:

"At a banquet given on Friday evening in honor of the Baker City and Astoria high school debating teams, Superintendent J. H. Ackerman, in responding to the toast, "The School Situation in Oregon," among other things said that educational inspiration and improvement of schools comes from above. The character of the high schools of a state is determined directly by the strength of the support that is given its State University. In going into any state the condition of its high schools could be told by visiting the state university. Likewise, the quality of the work of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades can be determined from observing the high schools. A school system is always improved through influence from above. The opponents of the appropriation for the State University are wholly mistaken in assuming that Oregon's public schools can be improved without strengthening the State University."

The second annual report of the Woman's Social and Political Union in England (popularly known as the suffragists), has just been published. It shows that during the year ending February, 1908, the society expended $32,500, as compared with $12,500 the year before; that its sales of literature have risen from $300 in 1906 to $3000 in 1907; its office space has been doubled, the staff trebled, and the number of subscribers almost quadrupled. It has held more than 5000 meetings all over England, of which 400 were attended by upward of 1000 people each. It has taken an active part in defeating 13 local elections; 130 women have spent an aggregate of 370 weeks in prison for their activity in behalf of the ballot, and the number of women willing to go to jail for the cause is constantly growing. And the Woman's Social and Political Union is only one of a large number of suffrage societies in England that are all working for the same end. The organ of the union, "Votes for Women," is about to be changed from a monthly to a weekly.

It is not generally known in America that women can vote for the members of parliament of the kingdom of Bohemia. In the recent election the press reports say that the women cast an unusually large vote. Several women had been nominated for parliament, the first time that such a thing had happened in Middle Europe. None of them was elected, but it is said that they polled a very creditable vote.

Though the question of whether it is better to provide for an armed bodyguard to follow the president and members of his cabinet all the time, or to compel these officials to remain in the bullet and bomb proof cages, has not yet become a national issue it may, if present tendencies are continued.

Somebody has figured out that members of the house talked on an average of 220 words a minute the other day. That was going some, we'll admit, but but a lot of them will have to talk even faster than that when they get back home and are called on for a few explanations.

If congress is as free from corrupt lobbying as members of the house sub marine investigating committee seem to think, there must be something akin to hypnotism going on in connection with some legislation.

However, the Japs are far too wise to allow the failure of the president to get all the battleships he wanted from congress to tempt them into precipitating a scrap.

As Uncle Sam would not care to see the Pacific coasters idle all the time, he will not grant their wish to have the battleship fleet kept on the coast permanently.

Let us hope the supreme court will not reverse Attorney General Bonaparte, who has decided that the new employers' liability law is constitutional.

The easiest and quickest way to get called a liar is to get up in a crowd and pretend to be able to tell what constitutes "sound finance."

CLUB'S VISIT TO ALBANY SOME TIME IN FUTURE

Albany Herald: The board of governors of the Eugene Commercial Club has asked the board of trustees of the club to invite Bury J. Dasent, the newly elected booster for Albany, to come to Eugene as the guest of the club the second Monday in May, and address the regular meeting of the club that evening in order to show Albany that Eugene is interested in the welfare of her sister cities in the Willamette valley. The proposed excursion of Eugene people to Albany has been hanging fire, as the Albany people desired to wait until they had their commercial club in good running order. Mr Dasent is a well-known man in Portland and an interesting speaker.

UNIVERSITY BAKERY IN NEW QUARTERS

The University Bakery has moved from the Odd Fellows building on East Ninth street to the new Hilin building, 28 East Ninth street. The new store is now about fitted up for taking care of the bakery's business, and a [illegible] line will be carried than ever before. An ice cream [illegible] will be opened Saturday in connection with the state, and light lunches will also be served at all hours.

CHIEF GEORGE M. SHIPPY.

The killing of an anarchist by George M. Shippy, chief of the Chicago police department, after the man had wounded the chief and his son, started the police of the country and the federal authorities in a war of extermination upon anarchism. Secretary Straus of the commerce and labor department promptly issued an order to the immigration authorities to exercise more rigid caution in admitting immigrants, and steps were taken to deport all alien anarchists who are apprehended. The attempt upon Shippy's life is believed to have been part of a general plot against the Chicago police.

THE VANISHED DAYS

Lay the jest about the julep in the camphor balls at last,
For the miracle has happened and the olden days are past;
That which makes Milwaukee thirsty does not foam in Tennessee,
And the lid on old Missouri is as tight-locked as can be.
Oh, the comic papers colonel and his cronies may well sigh,
For the mint is waving gaily, but the South is going dry.

By the still side on the hill side in Kentucky all is still,
For the old damp refreshment must be dipped up from the rill.
N'th C'lina's stately ruler gives his soda glass a shove,
And discusses local option with the South C'lina guv.
It is useless at the fountain to be winkful of the eye—
For the cocktail glass is dusty and the South is going dry.

It is water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink.
We no longer hear the music of the mellow crystal clink,
When the Colonel and the Major, the General and the Jedge,
Meet to have a little nip to give their appetites an edge.
For the eggnog now is eggless and the rye has gone awry,
And the punchbowls hold carnations, and the South is going dry.

All the nightcaps now have tassels and are worn upon the head—
Not the night caps that were taken when nobody went to bed;
And the breeze above the bluegrass is as solemn as is death,
For it bears no pungent cloveting on its odorific breath.
And each man can walk a chalk'line when the stars are in the sky,
For the fizz glass now is fizzless, and the South is going dry.

Lay the jest about the julep 'neath the chestnut tree at last,
For there's but one kind of moonshine and the olden days are past;
For the waterwagon rumbles through the Southland on its trip,
And it helps no one to drop off to pick up the driver's whip.
For the mint bed makes a pasture and the corkscrew hangeth high,
And all is still along the still side, and the South is going dry.

—Atlanta Georgian.

IN MEMORIAM

Whereas, The Silent Messenger has again crossed our portals and without rap or password entered our midst and bore away one of our noble workers; and

Whereas, We bow down with humble submission to His divine will, yet we keenly feel the loss of our dear brother, James Parker; our order has lost a noble member, one whose example we should all try to emulate; therefore be it

Resolved, That the members of the Pleasant Hill grange, No. 284, extend to the bereaved family their sincere sympathy in their sorrow, and that a page be set apart in our journal to his memory.

He Got What He Needed.

"Nine years ago it looked as if my time had come," says C. Farthing, of Mill Creek, Ind. Ter. "I was so run down that life hung on a very slender thread. It was then that my druggist recommended Electric Bitters. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed—strength. I had one foot in the grave, but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again, and I've been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at W. A. Kuykendall's drug store. 50c.
