SMITH'S ARREST CREATES SENSATION AT PRINEVILLE

Prineville, Or., May 4.—Former Sheriff C. Sam Smith was arraigned in the circuit court before Judge W. L. Bradshaw at 2 o'clock this afternoon on four indictments filed by District Attorney Frank Menefee. He is accused of burning a sheepherder's house at the shearing plant of ex-Congressman J. N. Williamson, of exposing poison for the purpose of killing Williamson's sheep and with cutting wire fences on the property of Charles Altschul, leased by the former congressman. On request of his counsel, Smith was given until tomorrow to enter a plea, and it is probable that the first trial on one of the arson charges will not begin until Wednesday. The defendant is at liberty on $5000 bond.

The trial of Smith will undoubtedly be one of the greatest legal battles ever witnessed in this part of the state. In the prosecution the District Attorney will be assisted by his deputy, W. A. Bell, and H. S. Wilson, of The Dalles, who assisted in the defense of Williamson during the land fraud trial. Smith will be defended by J. R. Wyatt and J. K. Weatherford, of Albany, and George W. Barnes, of Prineville.

Practically the entire population of Prineville is arrayed on one or the other side, and no topic is being discussed. Both Smith and Williamson have many powerful and loyal friends and the defendants in their struggle for vindication will have the advantage of everything that money can procure. Up to the beginning of this controversy, Smith, who is a cattle man, and Williamson, who is a sheepman, have been warm friends. In fact, Smith was indicted by Francis J. Heney on the charge of attempting to influence witnesses in the congressman's behalf. This charge has been held over him for a long time. It is generally maintained that this affair has little to do with the war between cattle and sheepmen which for a quarter century has blackened the history of Crook county. Investigation, however, shows that it is a logical outgrowth of the conditions which have prevailed for so long. The basic theory of the prosecution is that Smith committed the crime charged because Williamson refused to buy his hay or the right to graze his sheep on his stubble during the winter. Larkin Elliott, a sheepherder formerly in Smith's employ, who was jointly indicted with him on the various charges, is said to have made a full confession of the crime alleged. While this is common street talk, the authorities are extremely reticent and will make no admissions other than that Elliott will be a witness for the prosecution. Anticipating such a development, the attorneys for defense will have many witnesses present to attack Elliott's reputation for veracity.

The main line of defense will be that Smith is the victim of a far-reaching conspiracy arising out of political enmities. In substance the fact that Smith was arrested and held in jail for a week, although his friends could have given bonds for $100,000 if necessary, and was denied bail until an order could be procured from Judge Bradshaw, then at Baker City. His son, Stanley Smith, aged 14 years, it is said, was also held a prisoner on a misdemeanor charge for a week, and cut off from all communications with relatives and friends. It is said, however, that although sweated daily by officials, that the lad revealed nothing which would assist in the prosecution.

Everything in Prineville is quiet, and the majority of the citizens say it will remain so during the trial. There are many to doubt this, however. Sheriff Frank Elkins is being praised by many as the Moses to lead Crook county out of the wilderness of lawlessness. Smith sympathizers, on the other hand, denounce him as a tool of the Williamson faction.

Less than a year ago Mr. Norcross was asked to put a price on the property, and when he put it at $25,000 some of his friends declared he was crazy for asking so much.—Ex.
