ONE SIDED.

The speaker in the meeting Has everything his way. The audience must listen To what he has to say. No one talks back or offers Suggestions to his face. Please tell us, then, why should he Not make with ease a case?

Not like a rough and tumble Discussion on the street. That he may chance to meet. No; things are very different. For when he has the call It's up to all dissenters To go and hire a hall.

The man who holds the platform When he has paid the rent Can also hold opinions Of any twist or bent. There may be some objectors To his pet line of talk. And, while they have a recourse It is to take a walk.

They saw the air expounding Their viewpoint of the law. They mercilessly hammer Large chested men of straw. They grill the ones who differ And put them on the rack And win their case in triumph With no one to talk back.

Where It Would Help. "You heard about the new noiseless gun?" "Yes." "I wonder if the principle could be applied to the man who is inclined to shoot off his mouth?"

Wanted, a Better Way.

"What is your recommendation for a social reform?" "Mine?" "Yes." "Well, I think we should have a more direct, less painful and less cumbersome way of settling our heinousness." "What do you mean?" "We first have to buy a little principle or dinkling at an enormous cost, don't we?" "Yes." "Then marry them to our daughters." "Right." "Then we have to divorce them at a high figure for settlement before the girls can be comfortable." "I see."

Running a Risk.

"Pretty close run, is he?" "Yes; he is living from hand to mouth." "Bad as that?" "Yes, and almost worse. I understand the connection is so close that he almost bites his hand sometimes."

Supplied with His Kind.

"He is crazy to go on the stage." "Why doesn't he go?" "He would but for one thing." "Folks object?" "No. They are not needing any scene shifters."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The uses of adversity are blessed indeed when they point the way to prosperity.

The best and most universal mascot is hard work and plenty of it faithfully persevered in.

Many a man when he has drowned his trouble straightway hunts some more that he may send it by the same route.

People are much inclined to take you at your own valuation, so keep a stiff upper lip and display the original price tag.

Trouble always has plenty of promoters, not a few of which masquerade under the guise of peacemakers.
